THE WAR IN ITALY.

Particulars of the Battle of Solferino—Dispatches from both Sides—Austrian Acknowledgment of Defeat.

The following telegrams contain all that is known in regard to the great battle on the 24th of June:

NAPOLEON TO THE EMPRESS.

CAVRIANA, Sunday, June 26—1:30 P. M.

It is impossible as yet to obtain the details of the battle of yesterday. The enemy withdrew last night. I have passed the night in the room occupied in the morning by the Emperor of Austria. Gen. Niel has been appointed a Marshal of France.

CAVRIANA, Friday, June 24—11½ A. M.

The Austrians who had crossed the Mincio for the purpose of attacking us with their whole body have been obliged to abandon their positions and withdraw to the left bank of the river. They have blown up the bridge at Goito. The loss of the enemy is very considerable, ours is much less. We have taken thirty cannon, more than 7,000 prisoners, and three flags. Gen. Niel and his corps d'armée have covered themselves with glory as well as the whole army. The Sardinian army inflicted great loss on the enemy, after having contended with great fury against superior forces.

The Paris Press says that private messages from Rome are spoken of, which put down the Austrian loss at the enormous numbers of 25,000 hors du combat and 10,000 taken prisoners, together with 16 flags and 18 pieces of cannon. This, however, lacks confirmation.

The following is the order of the day published by the Emperor Napoleon after the battle of Solferino:

"CAVRIANA, Saturday, June 25.

Soldiers: The enemy who believed themselves able to regain by force the Chiese, have recrossed the Mincio. You have worthily defended the honor of France. Solferino surpasses the recollection of Lonato and Castiglione. In twelve hours you have repulsed the efforts of one hundred and fifty thousand men. Your enfeebled foe did not rest there; the numerous artillery of the enemy occupied formidable positions for over three leagues, which you carried. Your country thanks you for your courage and perseverance, and towards the Mincio. We have taken some thirty cannon and 8,000 prisoners. The Austrian army fought with the same valor against superior forces, and worthily is that army to uphold Austria's arms. Blood has not been shed in vain, for the glory of France and the happiness of the people."

No communication occurred of the battle had reached Paris. It was inferred from the telegraphic that the French army endured so severely that two days after the battle it was still unable to resume the offensive.

There were vague reports of 10,000 to 12,000 French troops having been killed and wounded.

The following is the Austrian official account of the battle:

"VERONA, Saturday, June 25.

We fell back yesterday our right wing extended Pozzolengo, Solferino, and Cavriana, and the left wing pressed forward as far as Castellone and Cassa Guidetti, but was driven back by the enemy.

A common fight ensue between the two entire armies at 10 A. M. yesterday. Our left, under Gen. Wimpffen, advanced as far as Cilicero. In the afternoon both wing a concentrated assault on the heavily defended town of Solferino. Our right wing repulsed the Piedmontese, but on the other hand the center of our center could not be restored, and our forces fell back towards Verona. The development of powerful masses of the enemy against our left wing and the advance of his main body against Volta caused our retreat, which began late in the evening."

Another correspondence contains the following:

"VERONA, Friday, June 24.

The day before yesterday the Austrian army crossed the Mincio at Goito, and yesterday came upon the separate force of the enemy in the Chiese. After an obstinate contest of 12 hours our army withdrew across the Mincio. Our head-quarters are now at Villa Franca."

The London Times says that the Austrians have most carefully studied their ground, and that history scarcely records a bulletin in which such a disaster is more explicitly avowed.

A message from Carriana announces that the Emperor Napoleon, on the day of the battle, was constantly in the hottest of the fire. Gen. Lamy, who accompanied him, had his horse killed under him.

The Monitor says that the battle will take the name of the Battle of Solferino.

Official American correspondence, of the 27th of June, contains the following:

"The Emperor of Austria will soon return to Vienna on account of imperfect health. The Commander-in-Chief of the army which is preparing for battle, is given to Gen. Hess."

Prince Napoleon arrived at Parma on the 20th, and was received with enthusiasm.

Forty thousand men were embarking in Algeria for the Adriatic, and at Paris news was expected of the occupation of Venice by the French.

A dispatch from Berne says that 3,000 Piedmontese with 700 volunteers, had arrived at "Tirano," and advanced towards Bormio, at the foot of the Stelvio Pass.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times says it was expected that another battle would be fought before the siege operations would come on.

Patriotic demonstrations by the working classes in Paris were universal.

Large reinforcements for the French army were constantly quitting France for Italy.

A dispatch from Vienna says that the attack of the French on Venice and Tagliamento, about forty-five miles northeast of Venice, was expected to take place on the 28th of June.

The Austrian reserves, numbering 175,000 men, were on their way to Italy. They are considered the flower of the Austrian Army. Not a man of them has served less than eight years.

The Austrians have sunk five small vessels, a large frigate and three steamers, in the port of Malamocco, to prevent the passage of the French squadron.

Prince Eugene, of Savoy, had issued a decree extending the forced currency of the National Bank.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

PARIS, Tuesday.—Generals ARGUE, FOREY, DIEU and L'ADMIRAULT were wounded slightly at Solferino.

There will be a Te Deum next Sunday in all the churches of France, in celebration of the victory. The Empress and all the great bodies of State attend at Notre Dame.

TURIN, Tuesday, June 27.

An official bulletin to-day contains some details of the battle of the 24th. The Piedmontese who were principally engaged at San Martino, performed prodigies of valor, and took formidable positions but could not hold them, owing to a fearful tempest. The Piedmontese drove the Austrians from San Martino, retaking five of their cannon. Serious loss is admitted.

An English fleet of twenty sail is said to be cruising off Venice.

The Gazette de France says that preparations are making to get together, within two months, a force of 450,000 men.

The Sardinian Ambassador at Paris is reported to have complained to the English Government against the Secretary of the British Embassy at Paris for anti-Sardinian manifestations.

Great naval preparations are said to be going on at Cherbourg.

PARIS, Wednesday.

The Moniteur of this morning contains the following:

CAVRIANA, Tuesday, June 28.

Our troops have passed the Mincio without hesitation, the enemy having withdrawn therefrom.

The Attitude of Prussia.

The advices from Frankfort-on-the-Main state that on the 23th of June Prussia made a proposal to the Federal Diet to place a corps of observation on the Rhine, to be composed of the Seventh and Eighth Federal corps d'armée, under the superior orders of Bavaria. The proposal was referred to the Military Committee.

The Paris Bicle and Journal des Débats ridicule the idea of German mediation on the basis which rumor has placed in circulation.

It was reported that the Emperor of Austria would soon have an interview with the Prince Regent of Prussia.

Great Britain.

The political news was unimportant.

It is stated that, in consequence of but few reinforcements having been sent to India for several months, the authorities had determined on sending out nearly 3,000 cavalry and infantry troops.

The Prince of Wales had returned to England.

The Atlantic Telegraph Company had issued their prospectus, inviting subscriptions to the new capital of £600,000 on the terms already made public. The directors pledge themselves to enter into no contract without seeking the advice of the highest scientific and practical authorities in England and America. The first operations are to endeavor to raise the old cable.

A Deputy from Canada had waited upon Queen Victoria to invite her to be present at the opening of the Great Victoria Bridge next year.

The elections for Members of Parliament to fill the seats vacated by those who have accepted office in the new Ministry, were generally resulting in the return of the Government candidates. Mr. GLADSTONE, however, was being close pressed for Oxford University by the Marquis of CHANDOS.

The Submarine Telegraph Company have successfully laid a new cable containing six conducting wires between Folkestone and Boulogne. It is the largest and strongest cable ever made, its weight being ten tons per mile.

The London Advertiser asserts that LOUIS NAPOLEON has made up his mind, at the first favorable opportunity, to make a descent on the shores of Ireland.

LONDON, Wednesday.

The Earls of DERBY and HARDWICKE were yesterday invested with the Order of the Garter.

It is stated that Mr. LAYARD is at Vienna trying to negotiate with Austria for the sale of the eight steamers lately belonging to the European and American Steam Company. Unsuccessful overtures have been made to FRANCE.

The Daily News' City Article says that the funds were weaker on Tuesday, owing to the renewed fall in the French Rentes, which are prejudiced by rumors in relation to the cost of the late victory, as well as by the reaction of stock arising from the new loan. Consols closed ½ to ⅝ lower than on the preceding day. The active demand for money usually experienced at the close of the quarter continues, and few bills are taken below 2¾ ⅌ cent.

The Times' City Article says, in the absence of detailed accounts of the battle of Solferino, to enable the public to judge of its probable effect in predisposing Austria to terms of submission, the funds exhibited alertness on Tuesday.

In the Stock Exchange 2 to 2½ per cent. was paid for short loans on Government securities, and at the Bank there was a little increase in the demand.

FRANCE.

The news of the victory on the 24th imparted much buoyancy to the Paris Bourse, and the Rentes advanced nearly 1 per cent. On the 27th there was a relapse, three-fourths of the advance being lost. On the 28th the market opened with a still further decline, but rallied, closing at 69.20.

Trade in Paris was tolerably brisk. The Corn market was dull on account of favorable harvest prospects.

The Papal States.

A dispatch from Rome announces that Ferrara, Ravenna, Forli, Ancona and other towns have been occupied under the authority of the Pope by insurrection of the Pontifical troops.

The silver vase commemorative of the Peace Congress at Paris, is said to have been presented.

Austria.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Times asserts that for the last ten years matches have been so lightly contracted in Austria, that it will be almost impossible if the Empire escapes dismemberment.

In an autograph letter, the Emperor FRANCIS JOSEPH has issued ordinances relative to Protestants in Austria to be issued without waiting for the revision of the Council of State.

MADRID, Sunday, June 26.

By a decree just issued, one hundred and thirty-seven refugees are permitted to return, and all other Spaniards holding permission are permitted unmolested to do the same.

INTERESTING NEWS FROM BUENOS AYRES.

War Declared by General Urquiza against Buenos Ayres—Prospects of a War between Montevideo and Brazil.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Tuesday, May 24, 1859.

This day being the birth-day of her most gracious Majesty Queen VICTORIA, I am writing this amid a deafening salute from all the foreign men-of-war in port, who are thus demonstrating their emotions at "the day we celebrate." Yesterday was also an eventful day for the mercantile community of Rio de Janeiro. The English extra-packet Mersey, from Southampton, and the Brazilian packet from the River La Platte, both arrived. By the former, the astounding news of a fall in Consols from 93, by our last advices, to 89, and the inevitable prospect of a war, has had the effect of entirely prostrating every element of business, and threatens to drive exchange down to its lowest point. This will be good news for the coffee holders in the United States, who, if is to be trusted, will get out without loss on the several purchases which have lately been effected at exorbitant rates.

The news from Buenos Ayres is particularly interesting. URQUIZA has declared war upon that Province, and, it is said, has been assisted by Baron MUAU, (pronounced MOW-war,) the head of the celebrated banking house of MUAU, MACGREGOR & Co., with the sum of 20,000 ounces and the only three steamers which have been of service in those waters, and which were the property of a British Steam Company represented by the Baron. It is said that the Buenos Ayres Government have offered a reward of $10,000 for the head of Baron MUAU, who has sloped for Montevideo, but whether the reward is to be paid in dollars of the country, which are valued at 4½ cents each, or the patriot dollar, your correspondent is unable to state. From Montevideo we hear that the Government of that Province have refused to ratify the doings of the Brazilian Convention, which took place some time since. This may probably lead to hostilities between that nation and Brazil. Rumor states Baron MUAU to be employed as a secret agent on the part of Brazil in aiding URQUIZA to conquer all the petty States belonging to, and in the neighborhood of, the Argentine Confederation, and, in forming a grand Monarchical Government, the reins of which he is to assume under an offensive and defensive alliance with Brazil. News current!

A letter has been received from Valparaiso, which came across the Pampas, stating the arrival of the American bark Messenger Bird at that port, laden with coffee from Rio de Janeiro. Should this be correct, one of the most daring piratical acts has been committed, not to be equaled in the annals of piracy since the days of KIDD, LAFITTE, or even MORGAN.

This vessel, cleared from here some months since, bound for Hampton Roads, laden with coffee by the house of LE BARON & Co., at this port, and consigned to their agents. The captain, who is an English-American named DE LANCY, is represented as a man of very polished address; he borrowed $4,000 on bottomry from the house of MAYNARD, WARNER & Co., received $1,200 advance on his freight from the charterers, and it appears has now bolted with both ship and cargo, and turns up in Valparaiso, where it is supposed, with the connivance of the crew, and representing to the Consul of the United States at that port that he has lost his clearance papers, he will sell both, and divide the proceeds.

Besides having carried off the ship and cargo, it is said that he has also possessed himself of another man's wife, and that as her husband is a resident of San Francisco, it is not at all probable he will visit that port in case of a failure on his part to dispose of the vessel at Valparaiso.

The United States brigs Dolphin, Perry, and Bainbridge are still at Buenos Ayres and Montevideo, awaiting the course of events which will result from the very complicated intrigue in that quarter.

Yours truly,

THE MAJOR.

PERSONAL.

The President visited Georgetown College on Commencement Day, (July 6,) and distributed the medals awarded to the successful students. The Constitution is very jubilant over this circumstance seeing in it another evidence "of the cheerful readiness with which President BUCHANAN, amidst his numerous pressing engagements, appropriates his time and attention to these scientific collegians."

Governor Morgan, Lieutenant-Governor Campbell and Comptroller Church left Albany on the 6th on a visit to the Clinton Prison. They go as Commissioners to examine the capacity of the prison, and determine upon the necessity of enlarging the accommodations. Governor Morgan is accompanied by his Private Secretary.

The Venerable David Smith, D. D., who spoke at the dinner of the Massachusetts Society of the Cincinnati in Boston, July 4, was probably the oldest person in the country who made an address on the Fourth. He was a lad of 9 years when the Declaration of Independence was signed.

Mr. T. S. Hunt, a young geologist attached to the Canadian Geological Survey, has been elected a Fellow of the Royal Society. His name was proposed by Sir Roderick Murchison, Dr. Lyon Playfair, and others.

Major Van Dorn, U. S. A., who has made himself celebrated by recent fights with the Indians in Texas, has been tendered a complimentary ball by the citizens of San Antonio.

The Hon. Lynn Boyd, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor of Kentucky, passed through Louisville on the 5th, on his way home. He is too ill to take part in the canvass.

The Hon. Thomas Corwin delivered an oration on the Fourth at a celebration on the battle-ground of Tippecanoe.

Deplorable Casualty.

THE REV. A. KINGMAN NOTT DROWNED WHILE BATHING.

The Rev. A. KINGMAN NOTT, Pastor of the First Baptist Church of this City, in Broome-street, was drowned at noon, on Thursday, while bathing in the surf at Perth Amboy, N. J. He had gone to that place on Wednesday to preach, by invitation of the Rev. Mr. KING. Thursday morning, in company with a son of Mr. KING, a lad 10 years old, he went to the beach for the purpose of bathing. Miss NOTT, a sister of the deceased, was also of the party, and witnessed the sad event.

It appears that Mr. NOTT and young KING went into the water, leaving Miss NOTT on the beach. After some time, KING came ashore, when, upon looking back for his companion, he discovered him apparently disporting himself in the surf, but, as immediately became evident, struggling with cramp, for the unfortunate gentleman sank to rise no more. Quite powerless to render assistance, the lad raised an alarm, which brought a party of fishermen to the spot, but not in season to prevent the fatal result. They were only able to find the body, which they did in the very spot where it went down, after dragging for it two hours. The body was conveyed to this City yesterday morning, by the steamer Thomas Hunt, which carried its flags at half-mast in token of regard for the dead, and is at the residence of Dr. BUSHNOW, in Sixth-street, near Second-avenue. Arrangements for the funeral have not as yet been made, but will be announced this morning.

The sudden death of Mr. NOTT is an afflicting dispensation to the denomination of Christians with which he was immediately connected, and peculiarly so to the church under his personal charge, which had largely prospered during his ministry. Although only twenty-four years of age, he had won a high position in his profession, and an enviable reputation in the community. Indeed, there are few young clergymen more esteemed, or of whom higher expectations were indulged. The deceased was a son of a Baptist minister at Kennebunk, Maine. He graduated at the Rochester University five years, and with the Theological Seminary connected with that institution, three years ago, and was immediately called to the charge of the Church in Broome-street. A brother of Mr. NOTT graduates next week at Rochester, the deceased having been engaged to preach his ordination sermon.

The death of Mr. NOTT will be lamented, and his sudden removal from his large sphere of usefulness, deplored by thousands of friends and admirers. He was unmarried.

Accident on the New-York Central Railroad.

The morning Express train on the New-York Central railroad ran off the track on Thursday morning at eleven o'clock, one mile east of Oneida, while going at the rate of forty miles an hour, throwing all the passenger cars off the track, demolishing three of them, and seriously injuring an old lady and two young ladies, whose names could not be ascertained, besides wounding twenty or thirty others. One of the cars turned completely over and was broken to pieces. The accident was caused by the workmen leaving a rail unspiked where they were repairing the road.

ACCIDENT TO THE HON. SILAS SEYMOUR, LATE STATE ENGINEER OF THE STATE OF NEW-YORK.—He was going to the Fitzwater boat, foot of Harrison-street, on Wednesday evening. A horse attached to a light wagon was running away, and coming furiously down Washington-street as Col. SEYMOUR was crossing. The shaft struck him just below the right eye, fracturing a severe, but it is believed not dangerous wound. He was protected, the horse passing over him. He was picked up by the Hon. MOSES G. LEONARD, of Rockland Lake, and other friends, who conveyed him to the boat. Col. S. hopes to be about again in two or three weeks.

NEWPORT IN THE SEASON.

Watering on Bellevue—Summer—The Second Reunion of the Fifth Ward—New-York and Newport—Improvements—New Hotels and Old Residences—Society of the Old World and the New, &c., &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

NEWPORT, Wednesday, July 6, 1859.

We are now in July. The sun has waked his northern twight and looks down with a fervid power that oppresses while it cheers. Summer has indeed arrived, and we are no longer to be benighted in our reasoning and chary under withdrawing. Hither come, gold for the sun to drink in and revive from its frosty sojourn in the air, peopled with a myriad of inland wings, and the genial glow bursts through a thousand leaves of opening buds, while through the open casement just brightly the good sun. Why, may I inquire, and Nantucket, thereby of the gulfs, that the Italian Question, but the answer rest on element to our good cheer. Hereafter blows under Tamaqua, Tamaqua and Tamaqua as when Adam cropped flowers, and Summer answer back to us again a blessing that we know and feel to our very vitals. Then let us think in the luscious life before Kossuth. There are some who would gladly see where the smell of the aromatic fragrance should invite, from but footless haunt, and every clime, most wind footsteps come through it sickness with contentment. But how must not that the latest one, with such a lovely spot as Newport holding out its coaching arms within leap, large in gorgeous sense, and where the lazy sea fashes forward to flatter in the pavement, and the glass is turned up against the downcast face with a heat that scorches the eye and oppresses the chest, is to me a special wonder.

There are certainly some difficulties in the start. As I have alluded to TAMAQUA and TAMAQUA, I may mention that the former gentleman and his system had certainly some advantages over that of our Mayor. I question whether, if we had taken TAMAQUA instead of TAMAQUA, we could not at least reach the boat for Newport without danger of losing a limb. Any little tattered footfind, the Emperor reserved as a special dance kicks for himself. Whereas, as I left some evening ago, I saw, without power of remove, a lovely girl, the very hem of whose garment I would adore, crushed out of crinoline by a crew of stalwarth hack-drivers and porters, who would permit no one to pass. The condition of the city quays is a reproach and shame to those who rule it. Once on board, things went more smoothly. In no part of the world beside can anything be found to equal in splendor and comfort of accommodation, the water palaces of America. It was one of those bright, lovely evenings, so common to Italian and American skies, that invited to contemplation, and as the huge hospitality rushed along I lay back on deck and amused myself with contrasting the strange difference between the visiting one of those beautiful European watering places that circle the Rhine and that to which we were first striking. The contrast almost marked the character of the two countries as legibly as if it was written on the atmosphere. As we travel, for instance, with steamer down the Rhine, the traditional associations that surround us on every side makes us dreamy as to fairy land and bewitch our imagination with intoxicating thoughts of a land of song, of wine and romance. Somehow or other we associate the people too with the thoughts. We think of a race happy and contented with the joys which wine and song afford; living in the past rather than in the future, holding sacred forever those venerable ruins that look down in beautiful sorrow from the Rhine banks, each bearing many an old story on its brow, rather than tearing them down to lay out bright cottages and gay gardens, and huge highways for the future. We are reminded of a people who sing and think and dream and think, while other people work and job, and toil and jostle to carry out practical schemes. But if the national features of central Europe embody themselves as one traverses to some German Spa, the utilitarian features of America embody themselves as one journeys to such a watering place as Newport. The character of the one is inner life, imagination, sweetness of soul, soft, dreamy romance. The character of the other is obtruder life, physical energy and dash and daring, even to death. The Rhine steamer floats, for instance, phlegmatically along. The passengers have a holiday look, full of loud talk, smiles and joviality, the English contributing to give to the steamer a theatrical air, by sitting as they do with red "Murray's" in their hands, precisely like the wax figures in Mme. TAMAQUA's cabinet—the women as artistically transferred into statuesque sight-seers as were Mrs. and the Misses LOT into pillars of salt. Then the Captain of the Rhine steamer is as close an observer of human as of atmospheric nature. He watches the physiognomies of his passengers with the same religious attention as he watches the fluctuations of the winds and undulation of the waves. His heart is as overflowing with kindness as his log-book with the change of ebb and tide. He wishes to make a friend of every one on board, and he is more melancholy when he fails to gain the sympathy of a stranger than when he fails to leave behind a rival steamer. The crew are a romping, drinking, jolly-looking set, and the little boats which stop at the little bridgeless villages bring from hour to hour accessions of full-souled, friendly, kindly people, who shake hands with the Captain and the crew, and smoke and drink away with heartiest glee. The air is full of cozy, inner life; the atmosphere is warmed by soul-breathing goodness; the English stare at the ruins, and the ruins at them; while the look of the native passengers, Captain and crew, and that of the lovely scenery, the generous wines and the kindly, hewing old heads of the German castles, produce that peculiar impression on the stranger which we somewhat broadly characterize as romance. Then, on the other side, look at our Metropolis, dashing across the waters like an Indian arrow, the Captain stern and vigilant. Whatever there is of life is absorbed in what he has to do, and he looks like a part of the engine he rules. Then go to the ladies' cabin; the cult of beauty is striking, yet there is a sameness, mechanism and monotony. There is no romance of ruin, wine or song, but on the Metropolis rushes, bent on beating all other steamers, as the country is bent on beating all other countries, bent on making money by its speed, as the country is bent on speed to make money. Yet after all, unromantic as the means, the end is great, and pushes over by formidable pressure the sluggish tendencies of more dreamy peoples. This gives an air of grandeur and energy which do not belong to more sluggish and sentimental races.

But the glancing of the Newport light wakes us from this philosophic sit. The landing pier is before us. Would that we could prevail upon the mighty RAMAN to transfuse some of that order which prevails at the Ocean House to the Newport pier. It is but a miniature of the large picture of confusion at its New-York sister's. The luggage is not checked, for reasons known to no one, and there ensues a general scramble and scratch for everything, which creates delay, worry and confusion. I tremble to think of all that an unprotected female may suffer. Cannot this be remedied? Will not Col. MACOMBS, who has done so much for Newport and for its lady visitors, fix this additional laurel in his bays. One by one, however, these little shortcomings will be wiped out. This year Newport has made one great stride, in which all small failings may well be forgotten. RAMAN is there! He has transferred to the Ocean House a batterie de cuisine sufficient to storm a thousand stomachs, and that great want of all watering places, a first-class city hotel, with all its appliances, all its comforts and all its luxuries, in the country, has at length been supplied. Both internally and externally, we know of no more graceful Summer social temple, or one more suitable to its object. Join the Ocean House with its huge Italian stairways and corridors, and its vast conservatories abutting from the sun. The arrangements are generally admirable, though my friend, HARNEY, to whom, on such subjects, I bow with infinite reverence, thinks the rooms too thinly furnished, and the supplying department is a perfect model of act and order. As to RAMAN himself, whose name will hold a place in the bright roll of culinary worthies, alongside of UDE, and SOYER, and FRANCATELLI, RAMAN cannot be said, like SOYER, to be an inventor. He cooks, as does BERNHARDI, to improve on, and adopt the inventions of others, rather than risk a failure by inventing himself. PALMERSTON does not carry the cares of State more sorely than does RAMAN the giant trouble of such a house. He never wears a ruffle except in his shirt. Nor can anything be finer, as a piece of art, than the wonderful power by which, at all hours, he can transpose his mobile countenance from a look of deep sorrow to a great depth, in one of radiant joy as the next arrives. There is one improvement, and one only, which we would suggest, at which we fear RAMAN may rebel. We know that he served with the Prince of Orange, and was at the battle of Waterloo, and will not, mark "Boot through the slaughter of hotel bill.

Prince cooks a camp, and all the world a drill."

Yet would it not be more grateful, instead of the long, straight hallways which always do service, to have a number of round rooms at which parties might group? Ah, would it not be more pleasant and more reminiscent for such a life as that of Newport, to allow the guests to take meals at such tables as they might choose?

Though it lacks just Kossuthism, as we have said, yet is it not the season here. Yet every out of cottage, the Ocean House is now without some lovely dames that sparkle and glitter through its corridors. A few illustrations:

"Lovely and cheerly may loved the last

may be seen each evening on the beach, in a party that, from its form, seems to have been specially built for her by some kind fairy. Colonel MORGAN, the quiet type of the American soldier, as opposite in peace and as valiant in war as staying with the Italy at the Ocean. The conditions are silent, because of an evening. The Generalities have not yet called to the season.

The cottages are all in nearly full and. Among the most distinguished Summer residents are Mr. Gouverneur MORRIS, of Morrisania, and his family, and many, very, very pretty cottages, of course, are occupied by them. The gay and gallant W. E. TAYLOR, who drives a splendid team of bays to hand, upon the beach, and Mr. TAYLOR, of Baltimore, whose hospitality and munificence lend a charm to every society in which they mix. From a tiny little cottage, just inland in the left owner's care, and nestled in a bower, may be heard, sometimes of an evening, a sweet, mundane, new Parisian organ, making delightful the air around—the organ of CORA MONTGOMERY. And of a morning, the owner of that sweet organ may be seen, gathered as a true "figlia del reggimento," with minstrel gun on shoulder, pursuing the sportsman of the field, and bringing down her game with as deadly aim as any of the oldest sportsmen. Many other fashionable families of Newport may be met on "the accustomed hill," and various other delightful people may be looked in various other delightful places.

As to beauty, the ladies appear, even this early, in perfect bloom—young a little in the autumn of their beauty, in such startling bloom. Indeed, so late are one fear they cannot so suddenly have caught it from the sun. Naughty, insinuating people, might hazy it cosmetics—otherwise, what Lord CAMPBELL, now Lord Chancellor, in his unsophisticated Saxon vernacular, calls "a frisk vesicating of carmine," which he says the wife of his predecessor, Lord TENTERDEN, was much addicted to, her love-blinded spouse never suspecting the artificiality, and charging the coming and going of her complexion dependent on the state of her chest, instead of the condition of her tongue-tier.

In society Newport improves each year. American society gains rapidly in all that it needs—gentlemen and repute. Nothing can be unfairer in my thought than drawing comparisons between European and society and American school society. It would be just as fair as to take RAFFAEL, MICHAEL ANGELO, as types of European art, and compare the European and American artists. There are many fine, many hundreds, who, enjoying the amenities of all the opportunities for cultivation, and that, despite, from that area which the spheres, or institutions, impose, possess a softness of manner, refinement and delicacy of mind which is difficult to be found here where humanity is universal, though there are to be found as noble, high-bred, in its highest sense, and gentle persons in American society as in the very highest circles of Europe. The only fair comparison is the comparing environing circumstances, a method scarcely here when comparing Europe. If it were possible to put one question—where instinct is a law to enhance free society—we I can easily do not think American society would suffer by the comparison. If there lack the security of thought and well-measured feeling which the longest Europeans possess, they have a fearless of expression and physical energy which often the highest European has a not. Hence their inferiority in all the elevated branches of civilization, and their excellency in all its material departments. Hence their superiority to all philosophies, and their stimulation for all things practical; but yet, without, of most kindly disposition, and rejoicing to see every man improving himself and making as much money, and through it, imparting a much profit as he can.

The Hygeia Hotel in Full Blow—Grand Powwow of the Virginia Aristocracy—State Pride for R. M. T. HUNTER—Military Review at Fort Monroe—Admiral Commodore Cooper and his Staff—Beauty Gathered Over Sacred on Duty—Gunnery Schedules, &c., &c., &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

OLD POINT COMFORT, July 4, 1859.

The late excessively warm weather which has decimated the population of our dusty cities, has driven an immense crowd of pleasure seekers to this favorite Summer resort, and the Old Hygeia is now crowded with a gay throng of visitors from all parts of the country.

According to custom the Virginia aristocracy have held their grand annual pow-wow here to-day, and quite exciting has been the tone and temper of the "young bloods." The Presidential contest was all arranged in a few hours, it being settled that the Hon. R. M. T. HUNTER was to be the next Democratic candidate for the Presidency, and was to be elected by an overwhelming majority over M. F. BANKS, whom they predict will be the Republican candidate. The Wise men were nowhere. HUNTER is the best idea of Eastern Virginia, and the only drawback suggested in the way of his success was the Summer sit sitting of the sun. Several speeches were made and sentiments were unanimously drunk, and the day was past when such a man as Mr. HUNTER could be elevated to the Presidential chair, Mr. BUCHANAN was never once spoken of as being in the ring. Virginia may be put down for HUNTER in the Charleston Convention.

There was a grand military review which Fortress Monroe to-day in presence of Adjutant-General Cooper and his Staff, and a salute fired from the ramparts; after which, Col. BARNES, the Commandant, invited the officers to partake of a bachelors collation at his quarters. So great was the crowd of spectators, gathered in from the surrounding counties of Virginia, that a double guard was stationed on duty to preserve order on the Point, over the whole of which the strictest military discipline is observed—thus affording safe

The London Press on the Position of Prussia.

From the London Daily News, June 28.

To a future generation of Englishmen it will seem inconceivable that, much as we sympathized, as a people, with the great Italian cause, we did not more deeply appreciate the mighty moments in which we now live. In the Cabinet and on the field all is equally in suspense. Shall a great battle, worthy of Austerlitz or Waterloo, be fought; and if so, on which side shall be the issue? Or, shall rapid victory on the field be exchanged for the long delays of a dreary siege? Meanwhile as is the alternative in war, the issue in diplomacy is yet wider. We have still to learn whether the war, which is now Italian only, is destined to reach throughout Central Europe. Prussia has ominously threatened to lend the Germanic Confederation into war, and Russia has likewise threatened to lead her Sclavonian recruits against Germany. Civilization, at any rate, has brought us to this: that wars, actual or impending, which used to be dynastic, have now become national. Ten years ago all our European confederacies were confederacies of kings against peoples—now they are confederacies of nations rising in defence of nations. This at all events is a great fact in the general growth of popular freedom, and in the general retrogression of kingly power. But with regard to the Prussian Court, we believe that that Government is now what it has shown itself in every crisis since the age of the Great Frederick. Duplicity, false assertions, and prevarication have invariably marked its policy in important junctures, beyond any parallel in the natural weight of its councils in the government of Europe. It is quite sufficient to refer to the great French War, in order to appreciate the unusual predominance of French over Austrian influence at Berlin. There never was a danger surrounding Austria to which Prussia did not look for the consolidation of political capital. Uniting with Russia and Austria in 1792, under the Treaty of Pilnitz, Prussia in a few brief years stood worth from the cause of the Conservative Powers, and acceded to the French alliance under the Treaty of Basle, in 1795. Thenceforth a neutral Power, she calmly saw Austria ruined successively in the peace of Campo Formio in 1797, in the peace of Luneville in 1801, and in the peace of Pressburg in 1805. In many respects the present moment strikingly reminds us of the interval between the fall of Ulm and the battle of Austerlitz, which terminated in the above-mentioned peace of 1805. Ulm was the Magenta of the First Napoleon, and the long march which carried him from the source of the Danube to the Austrian capital and the plains of Moravia has now in some respects its parallel in the march of the Allies from Milan to the frontier of Venetia. During the march that succeeded the fall of Ulm, Prussia was as active in vacillating demonstrations as she is now. She sent Haugwitz, on the eve of Austerlitz to the camp of both armies. The story is variously told, but it is acknowledged that the mission of the Prussian Minister was in substance to make himself the umpire of victor. As it to complete the parallel, a mysterious duality now hangs over the person of the present Prussian Ambassador at Vienna. It was first asserted that the envoy of Prussia at that court had left the Austrian capital with Count Rechberg for Verona. We were then informed by a telegram, in a singularly circumstantial contradiction of the rumor, that Count Perponcher was about to arrive in Paris. As it happened that the Count was the Prussian representative at Paris, Baron Werther holding the same post at Vienna, the original statement remained unscathed; and between the two puppets, Perponcher and Werther, Prussia may be playing over again the old game of Haugwitz. Let either party be decisively beaten, and then no doubt Prussian policy will be restored to its former innocence, and lose all its ambiguity.

While, however, the alleged anti-Gallicism of Germany, if it be general, is far from being unanimous, the intelligence of almost every day lessens public sympathy even in that country for Austria. Daily some fresh atrocity, emanating more or less directly from the Austrians, is brought to light. It was but just now that we read with indignation of the barbarous murder of an Italian peasant by an Austrian Field-Marshal, in the circular of M. de Cavour. We now find that the Swiss Guards, which had left Rome, and had reached Perugia, have copied the example of Marshal Urban, and have there butchered men, women and children with indiscriminate barbarity. This diabolical inspiration seems to be the mantle which most naturally falls upon the chosen guards of Catholic and Apostolic throne. From all that we learn, there appears to have been no provocation for this fresh massacre; nothing but an inherent instinct of the devilish, and an innate lust of murder. These things will hasten the end; and even the blood shed in assassination, as well as the blood nobly poured out in battle, tends to the emancipation of Italy. No doubt some of these statements are read with incredulity to the north of the Alps. Austrian officers, who are gentlemen at Vienna and at Prague, are assassins at Milan and Verona. This dual existence strikes one, at first sight, as somewhat strange; but the evidence of the facts is incontestable. Unless we are greatly mistaken, Germany is beginning to see through the veil which the rulers have industriously worn. The German press, in spite of the censorship under which it languishes, has lately adopted a course which indicates his conviction that sympathy with a war of liberation must be universal. Public opinion there manifests every desire to terminate a vicious system of Italian Government, compounded of all the cruelties of military domination, and of all the artifices of spiritual tyranny. Austria may retain her own military forces, and use them in undiminished numbers; but this growing conviction, which appears to be now stealing even over Germany, tends directly to cut away all the sympathies which constitute her moral support in Europe. Losing territory at home, and losing countenance abroad, her hopes centre in her Quadrangle. But whatever be its means of holding out, it is clear that this quadrangle is now threatened, more or less imminently, on four sides—by Garibaldi from the north, by the Allies in force from the west, by Prince Napoleon from the south, and by the anticipated Adriatic expedition from the east. Four fortresses, even if they are impregnable, seem threatened with simultaneous blockade. This retrocession of the Austrian arms has its parallel in the retrocession of Austrian sympathies; and we trust that we are now approximating to the moment when both the sympathies shall be extinguished and the arms overthrown.

Attitude of Germany.

The attitude of Germany is remarked on by the Courrier de Paris, which denies the right of the Confederation to interfere in the present war, so long as the German territory is held sacred. It says:

"So long as hostilities shall remain localized in Italy, and confined, by the will of the Emperor, within the limits of the Italian Peninsula, Germany has nothing in view of a nature to justify the intervention of the Confederation. Hostilities, and interfere in the war. It is easy to assume rights by attributing to an adversary intentions which he does not entertain. That is the part which Austria played when France had not a single soldier in Italy, and when she was not even prepared to enter on a campaign. The great German Power has paid dearly for her fault. We recommend Germany not to follow the same path, under pretext that the Emperor and France submit with regret to the treaties of 1815, and have a strong desire to recover the natural limits of the Rhine. Let her not be the first to come and attack, for, in that case, she would incur in the eyes of Europe an enormous responsibility, and would run the risk of bringing about the very result which she pretends to wish to prevent. France, certainly, does not desire anything of the kind, and will neither be the aggressor nor the provoker. It is only necessary to compare the different language of the German and French Press to see on which side are lassitude and violence, and on which patience and moderation. But patience has its limits, and we sum up our argument in a word when we say that Germany comprehends that France is a nation soon ready for war; that at the end of a few months her conscripts are equal to old soldiers; that she has no need to assemble a corps d'armée on the frontier, and does not fear any attack. The word of her Sovereign ought to be believed. If Germany sincerely wishes for peace, let her keep quiet, and cease to excite her journals against France. If, under an idea of an ambition which does not exist, and of an aggression which will not take place, Germany takes attack, let her beware! She might find herself in the position of the man who, according to a vulgar saying, on the approach of a heavy shower of rain jumped into the river for fear of getting wet."

The Hungary Nouvelliste declares in the following terms the apology of the Prussian Gazette concerning the mobilization:

"The Prussian Government has thought fit to explain in its semi-official part the political objects to be attained by the mobilization. The arguments of the Prussian Journal have not appealed to us conclusively; on the contrary, they inspire us with apprehensions with respect to Prussian policy.

The Gazette lays a stress on the circumstance that the armed mediation proclaimed by the Government should have received the approbation of the Chambers. He one asks of the Prussian Cabinet a policy of armed neutrality. The decree of mobilization is a false measure, not because it violates this neutrality, but because the moment is not yet arrived when Prussia ought to act in defence of German and European interests.

Prussia, we hope the ministerial paper, "would abdicate the rank to a great power were the affairs of Italy to be regarded as a sufficient intervention." But France has proposed nothing else than to entrust the definitive settlement of Italian affairs to a Congress. Why, then, does Prussia, who would by right possess in it the same rank and vote as the other great powers, make such strenuous efforts to obtain this end? Does she wish, before taking her seat at the Congress, to cooperate in the military events? Does she wish to impose a peace that would leave things in the same state as 1815? We have supposed so from the beginning, and the article in the Prussian Gazette confirms our conclusions.

But the treaties of 1815 themselves, even in the smallest paragraphs, have been kept unchanged, and the very name of the Holy Alliance. It is not those famous treaties, or of compromise, erected upon a green cloth by military diplomatists, that have given Europe forty years of peace. It is the material power in an armed peace, based on the three great Sclavonic Powers, which, it may be logical, and let us hope, be logical, and let us hope, the revolution of the Sclavonic Powers, will be a better guarantee of the peace of Europe than the diplomatic combinations of the congresses.

cio, are not a guarantee, but rather a per[illegible] gy, for Europe.

The organ of the Prussian Cabinet affirms, to tranquillize us, that the mother "has no intention of favoring tyranny and oppression, because it says it, "the direction taken by [illegible] the guarantee of her liberty [illegible]."

In the first place, the [illegible] policy is still of too recent a date [illegible] reveal itself not in acts, but in mere assertions, and by the [illegible] are now in power. [illegible] are disposed to wish to be good, the means of doing it are wanting.

The reestablishment of the Austrian dominion, were it even encompassed with guarantees in favor of the Lombards, appears to us to be, in one word—impossible. Let Austria recover her security, and you will see that Prussia will have great difficulty in preserving at home her own liberal tendencies, but she will not assuredly be in a position to play the part of a protector of the Austrian Lombards.

The same journal undertakes to show that if Prussian diplomacy wishes to acquire the leadership of Germany by sacrificing her national policy in behalf of Austria, she is taking a wrong path, and incurs the risk of compromising the initiative that belongs to Prussia by the force of circumstances.

"Nevertheless," observes the Nouvelliste, "if on the other hand, war is thus had recourse to, the discontent of all those who absolutely cannot see any German interest in the Lombard Possessions of Austria, and who would only support with extreme repugnance the enormous sacrifices entailed necessarily under actual circumstances by a contest with France the discontent of all those, we say, will be revealed against the policy of Prussia as the primary cause of the war; and, on the other hand, private interests will be all the more ready to set every engine at work so as to prevent the disagreeable consequences they are likely to suffer through the temporary direction assumed by Prussia."

Bavaria has been endeavoring to turn the Anti-Gallican rage of her subjects into good hard cash, but with not very brilliant results. She has issued proposals for a loan of 10,000,000 florins; but has been able to obtain from the "national enthusiasm" only about 300,000, or about one thirty-third part of the sum needed.

In Prussia the mobilization of the army is interfered with by the want of surgeons. Seven hundred are needed, and only thirty have as yet been procured.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Times, writes, June 22:

"Something of the highest importance is now going on between Austria and Prussia, and it would not surprise me should the latter propose to the Bund to make the whole of the Federal army mobile. It is whispered at Berlin that M. von Bismarck-Schönhausen, who is Prussian Minister at St. Petersburg, does not give satisfaction to his Government. The three Prussian corps d'armée in East Prussia, Pomerania and Silesia, will not be made mobile unless Russian troops are concentrated on the Prussian frontier. There are now no Austrian troops, excepting depôt battalions, in Galicia. Arrangements have been made between Prussia, Saxony and Bavaria for the transport of two Prussian corps d'armée to the Rhine. Prince Gortschakoff has overshot the mark, and the Germans appear to be resolved to prove to him that they will not be taken into leading-strings by Russia. There is again a question of mediation, but men in office have to-day told me that Austria is not at all inclined to relinquish her claims on Lombardy, 'as she expects soon to regain possession of it.' In my opinion Lombardy is lost for ever, but the Austrian Government is remarkably "stiff-necked," and will hardly yield until bankrupt in men and money. Count Ferdinand Trauttmansdorff, who is a persona grata at St. Petersburg, is likely to be sent there, but it is not probable that he will be able to bring about a reconciliation, it being necessary that Austria should be weakened in order that Russia may be able to do as she pleases in Turkey. The state of public feeling in Hungary is so bad that it can hardly be worse.

"The day before yesterday the body of Prince Metternich was removed to the family vault at Plass, in Bohemia, but people are not sanguine that the system of which he was the author will be buried with him. An immense number of persons were present at the funeral ceremony, and not a single member of the diplomatic corps was missing. The Prince wrote his own memoirs, but they will hardly see the light of day until a couple of generations have passed away. The rumor that Metternich died in the arms of Prince Esterhazy is a fiction, but it is a fact that the latter was in the house of his old friend when he breathed his last. It is whispered that there is a coolness between the Emperor and the Archduke Ferdinand Maximilian, and it is highly probable that such is the case.

Pictures of the War by Soldiers of the French Army.

We take the following passages from a letter written by a private of the Zouaves to his father, who lives at Strasburg. It is written in French, says the Courrier du Bas Rhin, and does honor to the young man by the elevated sentiments which it expresses:

My Dear Father: I write you these few lines from the battle-field of Magenta, where the regiment of Zouaves belonging to the Guard has immortalized itself. [illegible] I am worn out with fatigue, as we have been marching day and night for five days. We lay down to rest on the field of battle, and this morning are busy in burying the dead and in caring for the wounded. Austrian corpses are on all sides. The wretched fellows have received terrible wounds from our bayonets. They are all noble men and brave soldiers. Their muskets are rifled like ours. Many wounded whom I helped carry told me they were glad to die after having again been able to speak with me in their maternal tongue, and after seeing the French so generous and kind to them. We are all glad to see that the reputation of the Zouaves, already so bravely won in Africa and the Crimea, has now been increased, and that the other regiments, instead of envying, only congratulate us. We are truly proud of so many encomiums coming from Generals, officers and private soldiers of the other corps."

The following is dated at Milan:

"Generals Giulay and Hess commanded in person at Magenta. Gen. Hess looked around him and gave his orders as if a fierce contest were not raging before him. Giulay, on the other hand, could not keep still. He kept spurring his horse as he started to bear his own orders, finding his aide de camps too slow in carrying them out. When it was settled that the Austrian army was defeated, Hess turned toward Giulay, as if about to tell him to withdraw. His face spoke at the same time of sadness and of joy, but above all of satisfaction at his rival's loss. Hess left, and Giulay remained upon the field of battle until, from a distance, he saw the first Zouaves who forced the passage, then he drove his spurs into his horse's flanks, and rejoined his retreating troops."

We extract the following passages from a letter written by an under officer of the Third Regiment of Grenadiers of the Imperial Guard, to one of his comrades of the Fourth Battalion, remaining in garrison at Paris.

Hospital at Turin, June 7, 1859.

We accompanied the Emperor to Alexandria, to Vercelli, to Novara, and to Trecate. We there fell the time in hopes of having an interview with messieurs the Austrians; but they generally set out in the morning, after a night's rest, where we arrived in the evening, having entirely destroyed on their march, bridges, railroads, telegraph lines, &c., crushing with taxes the unhappy inhabitants, and plundering them of their cattle, bread, wine, and even of their tobacco. It was truly a sad sight. Our Brigade (Second and Third Grenadiers,) left Trecate Sunday, June 5, at 7 o'clock in the morning, and after marching two hours crossed the Ticino with little opposition. A splendid stone bridge had been mined, but only two piers were sunk, and after repairing them, which was done in a twinkling of the eye, we were able to cross with two rifled cannon of the latest improvement. The regiment immediately went on a reconnoitering party, three companies deploying in open order. We found the Austrians established in a redoubt and intrenchments, thrown up by them before the village of Magenta. At the same moment we received the order to take their positions.

"It was then 11 o'clock in the morning; the sun was burning hot, and our knapsacks were heavy. It made no difference; we took the gymnastic step, and ran towards the enemy. Our enthusiasm (elan) took itself each moment forcibly checked. Every twenty or thirty yards it was necessary to cross ditches filled with water; but soon the cry 'Down with the knapsacks and up with the bayonet!' was heard. All the grenadiers repeat it, and then, freed from their knapsacks, they throw themselves forward. Arrived at the fortified elevation occupied by the Austrians, we are assailed by a shower of shrapnel, but in a few moments the Third Grenadiers and its colors are in the redoubt which the enemy abandons, taking to flight to find shelter in a second redoubt, thrown up behind the first and protecting it. Once in that position, shot are hailed down upon us again and again. We advance, our bayonets in rest; but the Austrians, ten times more numerous than we, obstinately resist this time, and we are obliged to beat a retreat into the first redoubt, while waiting for a reinforcement."

Details of the victory of Magenta here follow, and the writer proceeds:

"The regiment with about 1,200 men (for we had detachments at other points) has attacked and taken an entrenched position defended by more than five thousand Austrians. The Third Grenadiers, to conclude, conducted themselves in an admirable manner, and every one in its ranks has done his duty. Many have moistened with their blood the field which has been a witness of a daring deed of arms. I am among the wounded. Hit by a ball in the left leg, I attempted to march forward, but my blood was flowing freely, and my white gaiter soon was stained with it. I felt that I was growing weak and was going to fall, when our brave surgeon came to my aid and dressed my wound. The sutler-women were everywhere where they could render the most aid. These courageous women carried water to the wounded even under the enemy's fire."

The following is a letter written by a soldier of the line:

Milan, Thursday, June 9—4 P. M.

My Old Corinna: Why were you not there? You would have seen a beautiful scene. I want to tell of the battle of June 4. That day the company came down from Trecate within two leagues of the Ticino. We set out at 7 o'clock in the morning, and at 10 we were on the other side of the river. After resting five minutes we advanced, and the company was deployed in open order. We went on about two kilometres, (a mile and a half.) At this moment Fessse said to Corporal Menard: "Well, yes! the Austrians! we will not meet them to-day; they are more than ten leagues from here." My old comrade, he had not spoken the last syllable before a cannon-ball from a redoubt occupied by the Austrians gave him the lie formally. Shot and shell followed the ball, and Gen. Wimpffen ran and said to our Colonel: "Colonel, take that position for me, with your regiment." We immediately marched forward, but when the Austrians saw us at a good distance, they rained bullets, balls, and shell down on us like hail, and five or six of the shell came hissing like serpents into the midst of our battalions. Some grenadiers stooped to avoid them, but the Colonel seeing them, cried out: "What is that, grenadiers?" Oh! Gee, my old friend, the grenadiers raised their heads, and answered the Colonel with the [illegible] however, the Austrians, seeing that [illegible] returned to the charge. Three times we attacked, and three times they were repulsed. At last we were on the point of [illegible] when the Zouaves belonging to the Guard came up with other corps. But the Austrians ordered large forces to advance from Milan, which on our side Canrobert had sent some time before, but by o'clock the evening about a hundred thousand men were engaged. To conclude, the fight lasted until 10 P. M., and the enemy lost the battle.

In the army they talk much of us, and when one says to you, "To what regiment of the Grenadiers do you belong?" "To the Third!" "Oh!" they answer, "you were badly cut up." Everybody has complimented us. Canrobert said, "Did the Third Grenadiers take that redoubt? Honor to the Third Grenadiers!" On reaching Milan we were overwhelmed with flowers, with bon bons, with vivas, and with the enthusiasm of the whole population. Even the young girls kissed our hands.

From a Sergeant of the grenadiers to his father, at Havre:

Novara, Saturday, June 11.

I am going to tell you a piece of news which you will be sorry to hear. I was wounded at the battle of Magenta. The 4th of this month I received a ball in my thigh which as yet it has been impossible to extract. I am going to give you some details of what I have seen. On the morning of the 4th we were encamped three kilometres from Novara. At 9 o'clock orders came to us to change our position. At 10 our knapsacks were on our backs. We advanced toward Milan, and after marching two hours and a half, we halted in a field of wheat to await orders. Then we began to hear in the distance the thunder of the cannon. We had hardly rested an hour and a half when an aide-de-camp came and gave notice to the General of the Division to set out immediately, as we had no time to lose. Our bowls were turned upside down and the tents were struck. A half hour afterwards we were on the road, but we ran rather than marched. In an hour and a half more we were at the bridge of the Ticino, which the Austrians had tried to blow up. Their fire had been opened, for I saw some wounded. The Emperor saw us come up at the gymnastic step; he looked satisfied. Indeed, I saw him smile! We heard the camonade and the rattle of musketry distinctly. An aide-de-camp came to stop us, to take us to the right flank. We left the road to take to the field, and were hurrying on when the fire approached nearer and nearer. We were already worn out with fatigue; every one kept silence by common impulse. An elevation made by the railroad obstructed our progress; cries of "Forward" came from all quarters; drums and trumpets began to sound the charge; at length we came to the top all out of breath. From the wounded met at every step the conflict must have been a serious one; the Austrians threatened to drive us back, and it was time for the other division to come up. We began the fire. An hour after one regiment was in confusion. Each one rushed to the best of his ability. With difficulty I had burned ten cartridges when I saw seven or eight Austrians within twenty steps of me. I rushed forward to pursue them, when all at once I felt that I was wounded. I tried to take a few steps more, but it was impossible; I sank down. Balls fell by my side like hail. I had strength, by the help of my hands, to get out of the way of the firing, and remained under shelter until evening. As I was lying on the ground I saw many wounded pass. The first I recognized was Lieutenant-Colonel B., wounded in the legs. I next saw my captain, wounded in the head; then a sergeant of my company, having received a ball in the abdomen, but still able to walk. About seven o'clock I recognized the ensign. I called and besought him to cause me to be carried to the ambulance. At the same time a company of Austrian prisoners were going by. He gave orders that four of them should carry me to the first ambulance, which I reached between eight and nine o'clock. I am now at the hospital of Novara, where I am well cared for; the doctors are very attentive and the nurses very kind. Many of the townswomen come every day to see us; they give us oranges, cakes, bon-bons, cigars. The majority of these women are very affable, speaking enough French to talk a little. We chat together; I tell them of the theatres, balls and amusements of Paris.

Miscellaneous Correspondence.

From the London Globe, June 20.

It is so untrue that the army correspondents had been sent back to France by Imperial order, that Edmund Texier, of the Siècle, after a few days' stay in Paris, has gone back to his post. The words foolishly put in the Emperor's mouth—"These folks describe a battle as they would a new spectacle at Astley's (Le Cirque,)" is neither in good taste, nor in any sense justified by what has emanated from their pens. A large number of wagons of a peculiar construction has been forwarded to Genoa, for the conveyance to Alessandria and the brink of the Po some dozens of flat-bottomed gunboats, the structure of which admits of their being taken to pieces and re-adjusted when launched on the river. The flotilla will move down the flood towards Mantua, while the Adriatic gunboats advance to meet them on the waters of the Mincio and its lagunes. The marines, or rather sailors, who are to man these upper Po war rafts are already in great numbers visible on the river works, for which they possess aptitude, the timber-masting and beam-splicing of the railway viaduct across the Po and the putting Buffalora-bridge into shipshape. The appearance of these amphibious auxiliaries of the allied army creates the same astonishment in these provinces as the presence of turbaned Turcos and African Zouaves.

By way of compensation for what Algeria has furnished to Europe, the Austrian soldiers taken are about to be employed on railways at Oran and Bone, (Hippo,) their allowance for these earthworks, being on a fair scale; and the ultimate object hoped to be obtained by this measure is the colonization of these fertile districts by the prisoners who may finally settle down, and perhaps invite their families and friends in Bohemia, Croatia, or Styria, to join them. This is quite the revival of what Rhouvos complained of in the first Punic war:

Vidi signa ego Punicis
Affixa delubris et arva
Marte coli populus noster.

The 700 men of the garrison that evacuated Laveno, and crossing the lake, took shelter in Switzerland, have melted away under the custody of their Helvetic keepers, who, possibly, connived at their escape, most of them being Italians, and the rest being too glad to seek some employment of a non-military kind. The Diet, at Berne, has taken up the question of the mercenary brigades and regiments in the Papal and Neapolitan service, and the Swiss Envoy has formally demanded of the new King, Francesco, that the rampant bear, emblazoned on the flag of his Fourth Regiment, as well as the federal cross, shall forthwith disappear from the standard of these troops, preparatory to ulterior demands.

There is some small talk about a detective of the Paris Police, a Signor Paoli, (of course, Corsican,) being sent from Paris to ferret out "the real wishes" of the Lombards and Milanese as to their future status. Any one acquainted with the Imperial system will have no difficulty in foreseeing an appeal to universal suffrage, the result of which cannot be doubtful. As to the Modena, Parma, and Tuscany, the same crucial test will be applied, and the only real hitch will be in the Legations, and also in what are now called by a telegram the cities on the right bank of the Tiber.

If the Daiwens were a reliable authority we should believe that a deputation had waited on Napoleon III. from Bologna, and that it been to "to go about their business and obey their Prince," and that another deputation had gone to the General in command of the Roman garrison, who had also snubbed them, and they forthwith went to cry peccavi at the feet of Antonelli. These two imaginary embassies are on a par with the delegation described by the Roman fabulist Phædrus, in his Canes Legati ad Jovem, when the terrified envoys

Totam confusi concacarunt regiam.

The upshot of the trans-Apennine appeal to the Emperor and King can be no other than the often urged secularization of the administrative and civil power in the Legations at least, the adoption of the Code Napoleon, and the other requirements of the Emperor set forth in his letter to Edgar Ney, (1849,) and in repeated other manifestations of his policy.

The presence of Kossuth and Klapka, and the formation at Genoa of an Hungarian contingent, will of course be variously and perhaps invidiously construed into a call to the Magyars at home, to rise and make their hay while the sun shines; but when Italian as well as Hungarian troops are known to be under compulsion in the ranks of Austria, the fair game of war does not forbid moral influence or national influences to be exercised on the reluctant levies who go into the fire like Sydney Smith's "unwilling Latimer."

The loan sought to be raised at Munich, at the modest figure of 4,000,000 florins, has only elicited from all Bavaria takers for the still more moderate fraction of 300,000 florins. Where the odd 3,500,000 is to come from must be answered by the echoes of the Walhalla.

The Paris correspondent of the London News writes, June 24:

"The fact that Prussia is making a serious diplomatic effort to put an end to the war seems to be every day regarded as more and more certain. But great establishment is felt at the positive assertion of the Independance that the territorial limits established by the treaties of 1815 are to be proposed as the bases of the announcement. The impossibility that Prussia can for a moment seriously suppose that France will listen to any such proposition, gives some countenance to the all but incredible assertions of certain German journals that a war with France is really intended by Germany."

The municipality of Montechiaro have presented to the Emperor a plous souvenir of French victories. A column, on which was engraved the names of the French officers killed in action, had been raised on the field of battle at Castiglione. In 1848 the Austrians threw down this monument, which the town of Montechiaro has collected again, and religiously preserved within its walls.

His Majesty accepted it, and ordered that this monument should be replaced on the spot where it had formerly stood.

The French in the Valtelline.

The correspondent of the Constitutionnel writes as follows, from Berne, under date of June 19:

"Interest in the great contest going on between the Austrians and the Franco-Sardinians, which, by the concentration of the Austrian army upon the line of the Mincio, appeared to be withdrawn from the Helvetian frontiers, is receiving a new impulse from what is going on in the Valtelline, a province of Lombardy, next the Canton of Grisons. This valley, which, after the insurrectionary movement that broke out there some twelve days ago, was completely freed of Austrian troops, and where officers of Garibaldi's corps were busy in recruiting and organizing, detachments of volunteers had been left after a manner to the guardianship of the insurgent inhabitants, when news suddenly came to the headquarters of the Franco-Sardinian army that an Austrian force of about a thousand men had debouched by the Pass of Stiffser Joch, and was going against Bormio, one of the most important localities of the southern part of the Valtelline. On the other hand, efforts had been made to enter this district by the celebrated Col de Stelvio, the passage of which presents such difficulties that a

[illegible]

[illegible] Rebbio in Piedmont, and [illegible] need of repose, and [illegible] only real protection against [illegible] consecration of a class of the people, [illegible] strength to that temporal power [illegible]

[illegible] Yet I dare not hope for new acts of Europe the immediate application of this grand principle. Democracy is still too powerful, even in the most good Governments. Besides, we are now at peace, and radical reforms are only to be effected by war. The sword alone enjoys the privilege of deciding great questions by a single stroke. Diplomatists, a third Army of peace, proceed but by half measures.

There is one which was proposed in 1814 by Count Ancona, in 1831 by Rossi, in 1856 by Count Cavour. These three statesmen, conspicuous of the instability of limiting the authority of the Pope, [illegible] kingdom in temporal it is exercised, and over the people who live under it. In its stead, Europe to remedy the evil by disarming the clergy and [illegible] the population [illegible] Government.

Nothing is more just, natural or easy than to free the Adriatic provinces, and to restore the dominion of the papacy between the Mediterranean and the Apennines. I have shown that the provinces of Ravenna, Bologna, Rimini and Ancona are at once the most impatient of the pontifical yoke, and the most worthy of liberty. Deliver them. Here is a miracle which may be wrought by a stroke of the pen; and the eagle whose wings [illegible] of Paris is as yet but freshly moulted.

There would still remain to the Pope a million of subjects, and between three and four millions of acres; neither the one nor the other in a very high state of cultivation. I [illegible] that the administration of his revenue [illegible] to manage his estates and utilize his resources better than he now does. One of two things would occur: either he would enter upon the course pursued by good governments, and the condition of his subjects would become [illegible] or he would [illegible] the errors of his predecessors, and the Mediterranean provinces would in their turn demand their independence.

At the worst, and as a last alternative, the Pope might retain the City of Rome, his palaces and temples, his cardinals and prelates, his priests and monks, his princes and footmen, and Europe would contribute to feed the little palace.

Rome, surrounded by the respect of the universe, as by a Chinese wall, would be, so to speak, a foreign body in the midst of free and living Italy. The octogenarian would suffer neither more nor less than does an old soldier from the bullet which the surgeon has left in his leg.

The Military Systems of France and England.

From the London Times, June 20.

Among the changes which the vote of the 11th of June has brought about is that which places Mr. Sidney Herbert at the War-office. Perhaps the hope inspired by his recent devotion to one branch of military knowledge may not ripen into accomplishment. The opposing difficulties are scarcely to be overcome; the causeways and avenues and great thoroughfares of that labyrinth are blocked up with impediments; the genii have been proclaimed against, prayed against, convicted of all manner of evil doings, and solemnly exorcised, but have never yet been evicted; old abuses, sacred for their historic dust, and formidable for their vis inertiæ, lie about, and the evils of change. It is but too probable that Mr. Sidney Herbert will recede before the hopeless task of thinking for himself upon so large and onerous a matter, and will trust to time and future opportunity to enable him to modify what he cannot help seeing is radically wrong. However, it is well to take him before he becomes [illegible] and to whisper a word to him while his impressions as to his new duties may be moderately fresh. The sum of our advice to him would be to use his eyes before he surrenders his ears; to look abroad, over Europe before he gives himself up to his military Mentors.

If it be wise to profit by the example of an enemy, it would be unpardonable to neglect the lessons that may be gathered from the experience of a friend. Our new War Minister does not require to be enlightened as to the capacity of the English machinery which he is now about to superintend. He knows what it could do, and what it has shown itself incapable of doing. The system, costly as it is, and curiously perfect as are its checks and counter-checks, has been proved to be unable to supply an army of 30,000 men when pushed seven miles into an enemy's country. It remains pretty much at the present day what it was five years ago; and in the [illegible] to Russia it was quite understood that Gen. Sebastopol could not have marched his 1,000 men ten miles from the ships without the certainty of losing half of them by starvation and exposure. Now, let us see what the French have done to the Service [illegible]. It is not yet two months since the Emperor Napoleon was as he says, taken entirely aback by the [illegible] act of Austria. That he was slowly and leisurely preparing for war the world will not believe, but he certainly had no expectation that it would be forced upon him at the moment when he was called upon to meet it. He, however, it happened; and from noting what was done in France, thus taken at a disadvantage, we may gauge the resources of her military organization. Is less than eight weeks France has conducted an army over the Alps an army of 150,000 men, and has placed that army in perfect equipment and thoroughly supplied in a foreign friendly country. They are not [illegible] the Republican soldiers of 1796 were, without shoes or clothes or food, and hurrying to fight for all the necessaries of a campaign. They are in the position of liberators among a people who welcome them as guests. They pass through corn fields which they must not reap, and through towns where they may not levy contributions; foraging is a deadly offence and the rules of military discipline are at one with the ordinary civil laws of property. This [illegible] require a tremendous commissariat and train to work its details; yet, we have been it produce results as perfect as Mr. Bentinck could see to [illegible] which or Kutusoff could [illegible]. We [illegible] question either from friend or foe that these 150,000 men have yet suffered either in health or comfort, that they have ever been delayed by the absence of the necessary munitions of war. Orderly and regularly, in one continuous [illegible] in less than a month from the day when the necessity became known, men and arms, clothing and food, a great army and all that was necessary for the subsistence and military efficiency of that army, went forth from the ports of France, and took their prepared positions in and about Genoa. The men were moved up to the ground the army was to occupy as they arrived, the articles for their present use and consumption [illegible] the stores were warehoused in a great depot, and they pass on to the front as they are required. We have never yet heard of transports finding each other in the crowded harbor; eye-witnesses do not tell us of guns [illegible] idly imbedded in the sand, or uselessly cumbering the quays, nor of ships kept waiting for weeks with their holds crammed with articles [illegible] little suspected of being at hand that steamers are dispatched to great distances to [illegible] hear of no strangely conceived blunders, of no [illegible] ity and parsimony—prodigality which loads the soldier with that he does not want, and parsimony which [illegible] his arms. So far as this deportation and this depôt have been described in our letters, they are in all respects the very opposite of Balaklava, and that there is truth in these descriptions is evident from the absence of those terrible returns which came to us from the Crimea, when regiments of 600 men could parade only [illegible] when the most daring imagination could not have suggested to our General to telegraph, as the French Emperor has just telegraphed, that the [illegible] morale of his army were both all that he could wish. This has just been accomplished before all our eyes. Mr. Herbert cannot but consider within himself that there must be somewhere in existence a system that can produce such good results, and cannot but understand that it is a very different system from that he sees creaking on about him. Could our Horse Guards or our reformed War Department by any effort do for a single corps, if it were sent to Lundy Island, what France, with not greater resources, has already done for this immense army? Let us, in a spirit of [illegible] half, as curious and interested lookers-on, we may learn from the war some lessons not only in supplying, but also in fighting, an army. It used to be a favorite theme for school-boy discussion, whether the Spartan phalanx or the Roman legion was the superior when both were perfect of their kind. Here we have almost the same question brought practically to issue. The Austrians are, upon the whole, better-drilled soldiers than the English. We emulate them in their mechanical precision, but we do not equal them. The accuracy of the evolutions of an Austrian body of troops is perfect; an English corps is by no means so smoothly-working a mechanism. On the other hand, any one who has seen a body of French troops on the march must have remarked two things—first, how fast they go, and how, when they get over the ground, they are in their drill. If it be the story of the light legion against the heavy phalanx. The Austrians are strong men—[illegible] upon an average that the French—good marksmen, not wanting in courage, steady under fire, and inspired by a high feeling of military honor, but they have never yet been able to stand before their French opponents. Intelligence and celerity have signally beaten pertinacity and solidity. Death has [illegible] more lifelong fatalities. The Austrian has been outmanœuvred, out-fought, pounced on by a foe so closely that he could not destroy his bridge or [illegible] soldiers his positions, and almost always routed [illegible] the facts—facts which even a victory on the Mincio could not change, but which the movements now contemplated under the eyes of Lombardy seem calculated to confirm.

5. We do not pretend to reproach the Austrians with a peculiarity which circumstances seem to prove to be an element of inferiority. The Germans are naturally a slow people. The accurate and patient school of martinet's spring from Prussian soil [illegible] tactique that is there in favor [illegible] adopted to the genius of the people. That it does not [illegible] however, against the élan of the French arms so to now ever again to source of being proved. Surely this is a fact that should commend itself to the consideration of our authorities. The Anglo-Norman is a very different man from the Gallo-Frank of the French, influenced by their [illegible] blood, are less patient and more impulsive than the Germans, we take it, of [illegible] and the [illegible] given to activity and intelligence and the [illegible] occurring in the plains of Lombardy may afford a fair opportunity for ascertaining whether we are [illegible] formidable opponents than the Austrians or the Germans. Neither these events nor others a thousand times more decisive could be expected to attract the attention of the Horse Guards [illegible] who came departed from the Chelsea Pensioners, who will rule at the Horse Guards, but we may draw from them an inference for our own edification.

The Atlantic Telegraph.

LETTER FROM SIR CHARLES BRIGHT TO THE LONDON TIMES.

May I be allowed to correct some portions of the article upon a proposed British Transatlantic Tele-

Wants in Asia.

The following benevolent intentions respecting the continuance of English rule in India, are expressed in the latest correspondence from the Asiatic country, addressed to the St. Petersburg journal the Northern Bee:

From the Mongols who have just returned from Pekin we hear that the Chinese are again raising difficulties to prevent the execution of the last treaty concluded with Russia. Instead they begin to prepare for another war against these Foreign Wretches that they are! With their miserable artillery, their old matchlocks, and inefficient archery, they are certain to have the worst of it. One of their celebrated archers, a man of the name of Ye-Kuan, has lately published an order calling the Government to attack Russians in all barbary of the Chinese Empire, to the exclusion of the English, and to dispatch an army to India against the red-haired barbarians. The Chinese Government, however, will not undertake such an enterprise; the right time for which, moreover, has passed away. One hundred thousand Chinese, marched to India at the height of the late rebellion, would have certainly been instrumental in changing the aspect of affairs. But the present dynasty is scarcely strong enough to maintain itself against the attacks of external foes, much less to carry out schemes of active policy in foreign countries.

SPAIN.

The Madrid journals of the 17th do not contain any political news; but one of them, El Leon Español, had created some sensation by publishing an article which declares that Spain is on the brink of revolution, owing to what it calls the dangerous policy of the present Cabinet. The semi-Midal Correspondencia Autografa once again denies a report that Spanish troops are to be sent to Rome.

OUTRAGE ON BRITISH SUBJECTS AT NAPLES.—MALTA, June 14.—Whilst I was making a note of the circular which had been sent to the Consuls, begging them to warn their co-nationals against joining any large assemblages of people, the following act of brutality was being committed by a Neapolitan officer. I give the deposition of the injured person, as received by Mr. Bonnin, adding some details which I have gathered from the statement of the father: "ALFRED DRAPER and WILLIAM WILLIAM declared as follows: They were yesterday, 13th June, at about 1:30 P. M., looking at some cavalry exercising near the barracks. An officer, a lieutenant, told him roughly to go back. DRAPER answered him, 'He need not speak so roughly.' The captain told them civilly to move back a little, which they did. Soon afterwards the lieutenant told a corporal to make them go further back. The captain said, 'Never mind; they are not in the way there.' As soon as he had turned round, the lieutenant came up and said, 'Go back, you blackguards.' DRAPER answered, 'I am no more a blackguard than you are.' The lieutenant then struck DRAPER with the scabbard of his sword. DRAPER struck him in the face with his fist; the soldiers seized him and pulled him down; he struggled and got up again, when the lieutenant, who had drawn his sword, struck him with it in the face and cut his lip open; he was again pulled down, and struck on the ground. WILLIAMS trying to help him, was pulled down also. Both were then arrested and taken to the barracks. The captain was kind, sent for a doctor to dress the wound; and told them they might go away, if they would promise to say nothing about. They said they would not promise, and should make a complaint. They spoke to Mr. GURNEY and Mr. PATTERSON, who came and spoke to the officers. At about 9 at night they were sent to the Prefecture, where they were kindly treated; beds and supper were given to them; but they were detained till about 6 o'clock this morning, when they were released. DRAPER's two lips are nearly cut in two. Before leaving the Prefecture they signed a paper promising to appear there again if called upon. Both speak Italian. The father adds to this report that DRAPER declared, "We are English workmen;" and that when they were taken to the barracks his son was dragged by the hair of the head while the soldiers beat him on the back with their swords. He wonders that his son was not killed. It is just to state that our own authorities, Mr. ELLIOTT and Mr. BONNIN, have both taken up the case warmly, and the officer is under arrest.—Correspondents of Daily News.

THE NEW ENGLISH MINISTRY—A FIRST-CLASS MINISTRY.—In one sense, especially, Lord PALMERSTON's new Ministry may be entitled a first-class one, as so many of its members have taken first-class honors at Oxford or Cambridge, but chiefly at the former University. Thus in the Cabinet, Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Cardwell, Sir C. Wood, Sir G. C. Lewis, the Earl of Elgin, Sir George Grey are all first-class men of Oxford, the first three, being, moreover, double firsts, while Mr. Gibson is a wrangler or first-classman of Cambridge. Out of the Cabinet, there are Lord Wodehouse, Mr. C. Fortescue, Mr. Lowe, Mr R. Bethell, all Oxford first-classmen; and Mr. F. Peel and Mr. Headlam, Cambridge men of similar rank. There are four more Oxford men in the Cabinet, be. The six already mentioned, viz. The Duke of Somerset, Earl Granville, the Duke of Newcastle and Mr. Sidney Herbert, the first three graduating without honors, and the latter obtaining a fourth-class in classics. Thus, out of the sixteen noblemen and gentlemen comprising the Cabinet, ten are Oxford men.

STRENGTH OF THE RUSSIAN NAVY.—The following is an abstract of the numerical strength of the Russian Navy in the year 1856: The total of all rates amounts to 152 vessels, of which 71 steamers and 25 sailing vessels are stationed in the Baltic; 3 steamers and 3 sailing vessels in the White Sea; 21 steamers and 12 sailing vessels in the Black Sea; and 12 steamers and 3 sailing vessels in the Caspian. As to the detail of the Baltic Navy, it is composed of 7 liners, 5 frigates, 3 steam frigates, 9 corvettes, 6 clippers, 2 brigs, 8 schooners, 9 yachts, 6 transports, 18 small steamers and 17 screw gunboats. Besides these, there were 174 smaller craft in the Baltic, consisting partly of floating batteries and partly of gun-boats. The Black Sea Navy is reported in number 3 lines, 6 corvettes, 12 schooners, 3 yachts, 5 transports, and a small steamer. The crews of the whole Russian Navy amount to 19,666 men, commanded by 1,284 officers.

Plumer, the Blacksmith—Interesting Scene in his Cell.

From the Boston Journal, July 7.

A deeply-interesting scene took place in the cell of CYRUS W. PLUMER, in the Cambridge-street jail, this morning, the principal feature of which was the administration of the rite of baptism to Plumer by the Rev. Dr. LORMOR, who has been his kind and faithful spiritual adviser since his sentence. At the interview between Dr. LORMOR and PLUMER, yesterday morning, when it was expected that to-morrow PLUMER would have to suffer the extreme penalty of the law, he said to Dr. LORMOR that he had never been baptised—that of late he had thought much of the matter, and that, if it was proper, he would like to have the rite administered to him before his execution, in order that he might in this way produce his faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as his Saviour and Redeemer. Dr. LORMOR replied that it would be quite proper, and asked him when it should be administered—this (Thursday) morning, or at the morning of the execution. PLUMER expressed a preference that it should be done this morning, and it was understood that it should be.

Yesterday afternoon Dr. LORMOR, with other friends of PLUMER, was at the jail when the news of the commutation came, and after the season of rejoicing over the good news, as Dr. LORMOR was about to leave the cell, PLUMER spoke and said to him that he did not wish any change made in the arrangements for this morning—that he wished the more to have it done now, as he wished the world to know that he planted himself upon Christian principles, and that he meant in his future life to show that he was governed by them. This morning, therefore, a few friends, consisting of Dr. Lothrop, Dr. Winslow and his wife, PLUMER's sister, Mr. Andrews, Mr. Thomas Lord and Mr. Cooper, (the messenger from Washington who brought the official commutation,) were gathered in the cell to witness the administration of the rite. Previous to his administration, Dr. LORMOR made a brief statement to the company, stating PLUMER's desire to be baptised, and the motives which he had expressed as prompting that desire; and then stated to PLUMER the nature and spiritual signification of the rite, and asked him if he accepted it as a seal of his profession of his faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as his Redeemer and Saviour, and as a covenant that he would endeavor hereafter, at all times and under all circumstances, to govern his life and conduct by the principles and spirit of the Gospel of Christ. He replied that he would and did so accept it, and then the rite was administered to him.

PLUMER's demeanor was solemn, and impressed those present with the conviction that wild and sinful as may have been his past life, he is now a changed man. He will go to the State Prison in a few days, with the determination, as he says, that the confidence reposed in him by those who have befriended him shall in case not to have been misplaced.

ECCLESIASTICAL.—On Monday last the Congregational Church in Northfield (in the southeast part of Litchfield Township) withdrew their connection from the Litchfield Church Consociation. They are now strict Congregationalists, by the passage of the following resolutions, with but one or two dissenting votes:

Resolved, That we, the Congregational Church in Northfield, withdraw our connection from the Litchfield Consociation, and we do hereby declare that from the date hereof our connection with said Consociation is dissolved.

Resolved, That the Clerk of said Church be directed to transmit an attested copy of the preceding resolution to the Moderator and Scribe of said Consociation.

This Northfield Church is among the oldest Church organizations in the State. They possess a fine parsonage, and a fund of $10,000 or $12,000 in addition, for sustaining the institutions of religion amongst them. The Rev. Dr. BUNNELL, of the New York Presbytery, Litchfield, is a member of this Church, and occasionally officiates regularly as their preacher. He is said to be an original thinker, a ripe scholar, and an impressive and powerful speaker.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL'S OFFICE.

Claudius Jones, a seaman on board the ship Emily St. Pierre, was sent hence by the American Consul at Liverpool, charged with having stabbed the Captain and first mate with a sheath knife. The prisoner and witnesses arrived here in the steamship Vigo on Thursday. Word was sent to the Marshal's office, and an officer was dispatched to bring Jones up for examination; but on arriving at the ship it was found that the prisoner had escaped.

PROPERTY IN A DISPUTE.

Messrs. Thurnesson and Bryan applied, on behalf of the Wardens and Vestrymen of Christ Church (Episcopal,) Oyster Bay, Queen's County, for an injunction to restrain the Rev. Mr. RANSOM, the Pastor of the Church, and also the Treasurer of the same Church, from exercising their respective offices; the Vestry alleging that they (the minister and Treasurer) have been removed by the Church, but insist, notwithstanding, upon continuing to exercise their offices.

Justice CLERKE held, however, that the matter should be brought before some Judge of the Second Judicial District, and counsel departed to seek Justice Ker.

The Forrest Divorce Case.

Mr. John Van Buren, counsel for Mr. Edwin Forrest, writes to the Albany Evening Journal in correction of certain statements concerning the Forrest Divorce case, in which he is engaged as counsel for Mr. Forrest. The following history of the case is given as the correct one:

"Last Summer I was absent from the country during the months of July, August and September, and the plaintiff's attorneys gave me a stipulation not to proceed during such absence, which I asked as a matter of precaution, but with no idea that the case was to be moved. Intending to be absent during the same period this Summer, and not having for several months heard anything of the case, the plaintiff being represented to be in Iowa and the defendant living, as he had for several years, in Philadelphia, I asked the plaintiff's attorney, about the middle of May, for a stipulation not to proceed in my absence, he having been for some time acquainted with my intention to be absent and the reason for it. Shortly after this, and on the 26th May, the case was noticed for hearing before the Referee on the 9th June, and has proceeded from that time to the 1st instant, at such times as the plaintiff chose to select, and entirely at the convenience of herself and her counsel. On the 1st instant (yesterday) the plaintiff not having concluded her testimony, the case was put over, on the defendant's motion, till Autumn. The Superior Court has regular terms every month in the year, excepting the months of July, August and September. In those months it suits the convenience of judges, jurors, referees, parties, witnesses, and counsel, and is concerned in the administration of justice, to have liberty to leave the City; and that season has come to be generally regarded as a vacation. The only additional facts I think proper now to state, are that my application I made to Mr. O'Conor was in the form of a note, which, with his reply, (if he made any,) he is at liberty to publish if he desires; and that this statement is made without any consultation with, or authority from Mr. Bradley.

You will thus perceive that you have been misinformed in every important particular of your publication. That it is not true as you state,

1. That "money has stayed the verdict of a jury and the judgment of a Court for eight years," or for any other period; or,

2. That "the argument was postponed once because Mr (Mr. Forrest's) counsel, John Van Buren, Esq., went to Europe," or was ever postponed by defendant or his counsel; or,

3. That it "was postponed once on account of Mr. Forrest's illness," or was ever postponed for any such cause; or,

4. That the motion for a Commission, which is still pending on appeal, stayed the hearing at all;

And, you will perceive, it is true, that for nearly three years the plaintiff has voluntarily, so far as I know, and of her own motion, wholly discontinued and abandoned her prosecution!

As I shall leave New-York in the Persia on Wednesday, and desire to advise my client what course he ought to pursue in regard to your injurious publication, I must request you to insert this letter in the Journal of To-day, and must request those papers which republish your article to give the same publicity to this explanation. Yours respectfully, J. VAN BUREN.

EVERMAN noticed the week's business in Breadstuffs thus: "The market for Hops and Western Flour has ruled active, and quite lively during the past week, and prices have slightly advanced. The demand has been better from the trade, and a moderate inquiry has existed for shipment to the West Indies and British Provinces. The receipts have been very light, and holders are anticipating a more active market for a few weeks to come. Yesterday's transactions were to a fair extent. Southern Flour has been more active, without any material change in prices, closing, however, with a downward tendency. The Wheat market continues somewhat unsettled. There has been a better inquiry, but buyers appear unwilling to accede to the demands of holders; hence, sales continue to be made in small parcels. The milling demand has improved slightly, whilst the trade continue to purchase sparingly. The receipts have been light, although fully equal to the demand. The transactions yesterday were trifling, the market closing quiet. THE COMING DOOM!—

The dead of night shall howl, the trumpet sound
The drum shall roll its dreadful alarm;
The hail shall on the tops—while the bolts
Of thundering cannon with ice crash and roar
Of tempest, and all the world dissolve
Of war, with desolation in its wake.
Shall the dead, small and great, rise. And behold
The Judge—to call to account the "Prince of Christ."

THE DOMINION COFFEE AND TEA POTS. ENGLISH AND FRENCH PATTERNS FOR SALE.

Joint owners of the English and French Patents of "Old Dominion" Coffee and Tea Pots.

THE POLAR REFRIGERATOR, WITH FILTER AND WATER COOLER COMBINED.

The ice box is made in a novel form, of compound zinc, and is completely divided into cells, thus affording greater chemical provision against the decomposition of the water, which has rendered all other refrigerators so offensive. This ice is placed in the upper part of the refrigerator, and the water, which is produced by the melting of the ice, is retained for its purpose by the cells, from which it is drawn as it is needed, through a filter, which has been so constructed as to prevent the escape of the ice, and the water added and drawn off by a faucet, for drinking or culinary purposes; an overflow pipe is arranged so that the water cannot stand in the box.

It is self-ventilating—the air becoming first chilled in the ice, and no one article of food can impart its flavor to another.

But the greatest feature in the manner and certainty by which the water is cooled, is the application of the principle of the Galvanic Battery, which, by a simple process, causes the water, in passing through a spiral tube, to be chilled by contact with the ice, and immediately purified, and rendered palatable and healthy by the operation.

The Times: Map of the Seat of War.

The accurate map of the Seat of War, published in the TIMES on Thursday, may be procured at the publication office, either in the WEEKLY TIMES or as a separate sheet—the demand for it having been so great as to call for a new edition. Price four cents. Orders should be sent in as soon as possible.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Some authentic particulars of the great Battle of Solferino—the name by which the engagement near the Mincio is to be known—have reached us by the arrival of the steamship Hungarian at Quebec, from Liverpool on the 29th ult. Her advices are four days later than those by the Adelaide and the Asia. Full details of the battle have not been received, but sufficient is known to establish the fact that the Austrians suffered a most disastrous defeat—which fact, for a wonder, they very candidly admit. One account estimates their loss at 30,000 men hors de combat, and the Emperor NAPOLEON's dispatches, while they do not estimate the number of the enemy killed, claim the capture of six or seven thousand prisoners, thirty cannon, and three flags. The Piedmontese, who were principally engaged at San Martino with heavy masses of the enemy, are represented to have performed prodigies of valor. Their losses were heavy, and those of the French are rumored to have been from ten to twelve thousand. The entire Austrian army had again withdrawn across the Mincio, and their head-quarters were at Villa Franca. NAPOLEON, during the battle, was constantly in the hottest of the fire, and one of his Generals, who accompanied him, had his horse shot under him. The rejoicings in Paris were universal, and preparations were making for a Te Deum in all the Churches in France. Meantime preparations are making by the belligerents to carry on the war on a still grander scale. The Gazette de France asserts that a further force of 450,000 men is to be collected for France; 40,000 men were embarking in Algeria for the Adriatic, and large reinforcements were constantly leaving for Italy. An attack on Venice and Treglemanio was expected to take place on the 30th ult. On the other side, the Austrian reserves, numbering 175,000 men, constituting the flower of the Austrian army, were on their way to Italy. There is nothing new with reference to the intentions of Prussia. The political news from Great Britain is unimportant. The Liverpool cotton market was dull, and prices were generally unchanged. Breadstuffs had a downward tendency, and provisions were dull. Consols were quoted at 92¾@93¼ for account, ex-dividend.

By an arrival from Rio de Janeiro yesterday, at this port, we have dates from that place to the 25th of May, and later intelligence from the River Plate, from which it appears that the anticipated difficulty between the Government of Buenos Ayres and Gen. URQUIZA has at last come to a head, resulting in active preparations for war. There is also a prospect of a difficulty between Montevideo and Brazil.

Two cars on the New-York Central Railroad ran off the track on Thursday, through a new rail not having been rolled, and five or six persons were injured. Among them is Mr. CHENELL, one of the Directors of the road, who was badly hurt. Nobody was killed.

The Police Commissioners yesterday adopted a series of resolutions declaring that the present abuses in disregarding the Sunday laws should be prevented by the whole power of the Police force and of the Magistracy. Next Sunday, probably, the effort to close the places at which liquors are sold, the theatres, and the concert-rooms, will be made.

The Rev. A. KINGMAN NOTT, pastor of the Baptist Church in Broome-street, was drowned at Perth Amboy, N. J., on Thursday, while bathing. His body was recovered, and brought to this City for interment.

On motion of JOHN H. ANTHON, Esq., with the consent of the District Attorney, a writ of error and stay of proceedings was granted by Judge CLERKE in the case of FELIX SANCHEZ, the assassin, who was sentenced to be hung on the 22d inst., for the murder of his father-in-law. A stay has now been granted in all the cases of the men sentenced to death on July 7th, and there will, therefore, be no executions until September next.

A large number of minor cases were disposed of yesterday by Judge RUSSELL in the Court of General Sessions. JOHN THOMPSON, a noted burglar, being convicted of entering the dwelling-house of Mr. CUMMINS, was sentenced to ten years in the State Prison. PHILIP WARNER, pleaded guilty to grand larceny, and was sent to the State Prison for two years. About twenty criminals were sent to the Penitentiary for periods varying from three months to two years. The Grand Jury were discharged for the Term.

Yesterday there declined 1 cent. ℔ lb. with sales of 1,400 bales. Flour was less active, and was 5c.@10c. ℔ bbl. cheaper. Grain was in demand, at essentially unchanged prices. Provisions were steady, and somewhat unsettled. The inquiry was moderate. Sugars continued in lively request, at buoyant prices, and with sales of 2,200 hhds. and 600 boxes. Coffee and molasses were in fair demand. Rice was quiet, as were likewise some other commodities.

THE SUNDAY LIQUOR "REGULATIONS."—It has been ascertained at the Police Office that of the 446 names signed with their assistance to the American edition of the "Regulations" against closing the rum-shops on Sunday, that 83 are liquor-dealers and rum-sellers, 114 live in New-Jersey, Long Island and other out-of-town places, 48 are "clerks," "physicians," "porters," "clergymen of denomination," &c., and 211 are not to be found in the City Directory. This is not making a very favorable show, and the moral effect of the Regulation thus comes to grief.

Cheap and Lasting Honors.

[illegible] proclaimed by a man to [illegible] the greater part of his life to the consideration of a monument of some sort to perpetuate his memory after death. One holds the newspapers to be considerably more enduring than Horace's perennial marble, and is satisfied that posterity will do something handsome for him if only he keeps himself before the public while alive. Another erects an "Institute," which being fire-proof is sure to be his memorial, at least until it cracks, crumbles and powders down, as a rule, or at least until the march of improvement, availing itself of the aid of Street Commissioners who want a job, and of the Common Council, order its removal. Another founds a college, and is sure at every Commencement of a toast drunk standing to his honor. Another endows a hospital, and so insures a lire annually in the Directory. Another creates a library, and mixes his fame with the springs out of which the streams of literature will flow for years to come. But ELLIOTT CRESSON, when he left the legacy of $6,000, which has just been paid over to the City of Philadelphia, for the purpose of planting shade trees in the streets, cunningly devised a plan for the erection of fifty or sixty monuments a year to his blessed and erratic memory. Some of them will be badly put up, no doubt, and come to nothing, but if the Philadelphian Fathers study Downing with care, judiciously invest the capital, and scrupulously devote its interest according to the terms of the bequest, his monument will stretch through miles of avenues, and be their chief ornament many years hence. It will bud anew every Spring, clothe itself in verdure, and yield a grateful shade to thousands of wayfarers. We cannot think of another investment of so small of sum that would bring back so many always musical voices of thanks to the giver.

We do a favor to wealthy people who are casting about for the pattern of a monument to commemorate their virtues and philanthropy, by suggesting that there is room enough in the City for many of the same sort that CRESSON devised in his will. A pretty fair forest is already growing on Manhattan Island, though the views are a good deal obstructed by the piles of brick and brown stone. But it would add greatly to the value of property, and immensely to our enjoyment, if every street, as soon as opened and graded, were planted with trees. The owners of lots generally are wise enough to enhance the value of the property that they mean to leave vacant for many years by setting out maples, buttonwoods or elms before it. A few who own land by the block have already started avenues of chestnuts and elms; but too many whole streets where trees will be sadly wanted are st'll left unplanted. "The boys," who are the Vandals of our day, are the worst enemies to such improvements, making catalpas, which they value for their blossoms—willows, for their lithe twigs—and some of the locust tribes, for their pods—almost impracticable, unless the owner of the property lives in the vicinity, and either keeps a dog with a bad reputation, or starts a mission school. But with all the difficulties that stand in the way of newly-planted trees, they are so rich an ornament, and so essential to save a street from an appearance of premature desolation, that no efforts should be spared to line with them all the sidewalks of the streets that are not business thoroughfares. We bespeak a generation of Cressons for our emergency, that all coming generations of citizens may walk in the shade of their generous monuments.

But if a city looks dusty, dirty, and repulsive without trees, that country village or parish that does not abound in them all sensible Summer ramblers will avoid. Nothing atones for their lack but the immediate vicinity of the ocean; and we do not believe that Nature is always responsible for the apparent repugnance between these two greatest dog-day luxuries, as the dwellers by the seaside hold. A few years ago tree-planting clubs were fashionable in rural places. Little has been heard of them of late; we hope we shall hear more soon. This is just the season to start them, and to make them permanent.

BROOKLYN FINDS A CHAMPION.—There is an old quarrel between New-York and Brooklyn, which dates back to "the beginning." New-York claims, under the Dongan and Montgomerie Charter, that her boundary terminates on the Brooklyn side of the river at high-water mark, and of course that the right to run a ferry to Long Island, opposite the City, resides only in her. This claim has always been denied by the Brooklyn Municipality, and a test case was tried before the Revolutionary War. A person who established a ferry communication not far from the route of the present Fulton Ferry, refused to pay rent to New-York for it, went to the Courts and gained his suit. It was then carried by New-York to the Crown, but before the highest authority had pronounced upon it, came the Declaration of Independence, and the long war, after which no more was heard of the matter. Brooklyn has repeatedly commenced proceedings for the recovery of her privileges, but no case has ever been carried to the Court of Appeals. Meanwhile her Common Council always keeps a Committee on "Ferries and Water Rights," whose business it is to contest New-York's claims, and devise ways and means for resuming what it believes to be its rights. But the money appropriations have been scant, so the Committee has always had an easy time of it. Early this year the Board of Aldermen directed the Committee to employ competent counsel and stand by for a fight. Before counsel has troubled himself much in the matter, a new phase is presented and a new champion appears for Brooklyn. The Williamsburgh Ferry Company last Winter bid off a ten years' lease of the ferries, of which that known as "Peck-slip Ferry" is the chief, for $30,000. The old Company refusing to part with their property at the foot of South Seventh-street on terms that suited, the new Company put up their buildings at the foot of South Eighth-street, and are now running their boats from that point in Williamsburgh to Peck-slip. Meanwhile GEORGE LAW, who had been running two boats between James-slip and the foot of South Tenth-street, made an arrangement with the old Company, and transferred his dépôt to South Seventh-street. A sharp opposition has been kept up since the 1st of May, and the old three cents' ferriage has been brought down to one cent on one line, and on the other the cent to cross purchased also a ticket to return. The new Company, wearying at last of a rivalry that threatens to sink money for both parties, notifies New-York that the lease they have taken is infringed upon, and that they shall expect New-York to defend the rights it guaranteed them. This New-York is prepared to do. But Mr. LAW claims that the East River is a national highway, and that no municipality has an exclusive right to lease, or can prohibit any parties [illegible] Brooklyn's quarrel off its hands, he bids high for their distinguished consideration. The matter now is in excellent shape. We earnestly hope that no impertinent peace-maker will interfere.

Why we go into the Country.

It is an error to suppose that people go into the country for the sake of being more comfortable during the continuance of hot weather than at home. Or if people go a-Summering with any such motive in their heads, the experience of one campaign thrusts it out forever. Men leave roomy houses and all modern improvements for cramped lodgings, little to eat, and that shamefully spoiled in the cooking. They leave comfortable homes to "mount and descend the staircase of the stranger;" they give up housekeeping to be kept at the convenience of those who welcome them only for the money they bring. They make sacrifices, do long penance, suffer martyrdom, when they go a-Summering, and unless exceedingly verdant, know it all before they start. And yet whoever has a glimmer of wisdom in his breast strikes for his Summer vacation and spends it in the country. One travels for pleasure, certainly. But where comes the pleasure in? On board the railroad cars, cramped with long sitting in one position, eyes full of cinders, lungs full of dust, dirty, sleepy, stupid, annoyed about baggage, insulted by conductors, shaved by runners and agents? In hotels, shunned by unfed waiters, swindled by landlords, tossing on sleepless beds? Among the mountains, panting with the steep ascent, dripping with sweat from tedious climbing, while the limbs ache terribly with weariness? Along the brooks, whipping them for trout that will not take the hook, stung by mosquitoes, and faint with hunger? In spite of all reasoning and determination to the contrary, these are unmitigated bores. Yet we rush in to suffer them, pay enormous bills for the pain, and truthfully aver when it is all over that we have had a capital time. For we go away from our "privileges," thin, pale, jaded, and incapable of doing credit to ourselves in anything we undertake, and come back, tanned, hearty, full of spirits, with courageous appetites, and ready to undertake impossibilities. The annoyances of the way, the hourly martyrdoms, we learn to make light of, if at the end there is a fat experience, and something to show for the expense. We are all ruminating animals, and experience far more pleasure in chewing the cud than in cropping the pasture. Our people are of a breed that is incapable of absolute rest for more than one night at a time. The nearest approach it can make is to change its kind of work, and by one fire burn out another. Those men and newspapers lose their labor, then, who preach up the humbug of going to the country for the pleasure of the thing. It is not the pleasure of going, but of having been, that charms us. The Summer vacation was the outgrowth of a common necessity—it was the "indication of nature," as the physicians say, and must be heeded. Employers who do not give their men a few weeks' respite cheat themselves; and those who from choice stick by the City throughout the dog-days, find before Winter that they are traveling in a rut; their thoughts run in gullies through their brains, their ideas travel in a circle whose diameter grows shorter at every revolution, till they turn on a pivot, facing every new demand on call, but unable to make a step of progress towards the accomplishment of any purpose.

SENATOR DOOLITTLE'S VIEWS OF THE NEGRO QUESTION.—The orator of the day at Buffalo, on the 4th inst., was the Hon. JAMES R. DOOLITTLE, Senator in Congress from the State of Wisconsin. We have perused a synopsis of his remarks—the speech itself being extempore—as published in the Buffalo papers, with an interest, caused chiefly by Mr. DOOLITTLE's opinions in reference to the destiny of the colored inhabitants of the United States. It may be recollected that during the late session of Congress he introduced a resolution in the Senate favoring the eventual colonization of the blacks, whether bond or free, in Central America. His proposition met with little consideration; but it is not for that reason undeserving of regard; and Mr. DOOLITTLE seized upon the appropriate occasion presented by the Buffalo celebration for its renewal before a popular assembly. Disclaiming all desire to touch upon those topics connected with Slavery which have become involved in the vexed sea of party strife, he called the serious attention of his hearers to the question—"What is to become of the African people in America?"

Says he:

This question "is the absorbing question of our own epoch and generation. If we look into the free States we find that very few among them are prepared to admit negroes to the rights of citizenship. In this State, when the question was submitted, whether they should be admitted to a footing of equality with white population, it was voted down by a majority of 190,000. In almost all the free States bordering on the Slave States, their Constitutions deny to them all political rights. The Constitutions of most of the new States provide that negroes shall not be permitted to live within their jurisdictions. Several of the slave States have passed laws providing for reducing free colored men again to a state of bondage. Such a law was passed in the State of Arkansas. Such a law also passed one branch of the Legislature of Missouri, adding to the penalty the confiscation of their property. Similar laws have been proposed in Maryland, Virginia, and several of the old slave States. The question returns—what will you do for them, and what will you do with them? Shall they be put to the sword, or shall they be brought to the auction block?"

The solution of this grave national problem, in the opinion of Senator DOOLITTLE, is to be found in providing an outlet southward on this continent for the black race. Unless this be done, he holds that our Gulf States will become Africanized, so that, in the words of JOHN RANDOLPH, "if the slaves do not run away from their masters, the masters will run away from their slaves."

Mr. DOOLITTLE does not overrate the importance of this subject, nor are his views without a strong support in reason and practical good sense. The abolition of Slavery by no means disposes of the negro question. Even could every slave be set free to-morrow, there would still remain the tremendous responsibility and burden of providing for a black population numbering scarcely less than four million souls. That so great a mass of colored people is to remain, in freedom and equality among us, cannot for a moment be supposed.

Such a conclusion is barred by the events of our history and the experience of every Free State. It is not necessary to discuss in this connection the abstract justice or injustice of refusing the negroes a permanent residence within our boundaries. That is not the practical question. Mr. DOOLITTLE tells us facts enough to show the necessity of colonization; and the quarter he proposes in which to plant the black race deserves the careful consideration of statesmen and philanthropists.

[illegible] shaded with old trees, will [illegible] white millers. In Brooklyn, especially, [illegible] is plenty, and if there is a breeze stirring, [illegible] sidewalks look as if dotted with great snow-flakes. These millers are very tame, so yet, submitting to be lifted by their wings and inspected at leisure. They are of a spotless white; their antennæ, to the naked eye look like quills; and the fine down that clings to the thumb and finger that lifted them, under the microscope are perfect feathers. More narrowly inspected, their bodies show a beautiful tint of green; in short, they look like emblems of innocence growing out of verdancy. In a week or two the gutters will be white with them, giving at first the impression that the housekeepers have been sweeping a shower of catalpa blossoms from the sidewalk, or to those who do not know the stolid consistence of our City authorities, that, in a sudden frenzy of respect for the public health, the kennels and gutters have been strewn with lime. But the demure lepidopterous blossoms that look so pure and innocent are the fathers and mothers of the span-worms that, in the hot Summer, will turn all our trees into nuisances, and make quiet citizens invoke with sudden enthusiasm the sacred memory of the gods. The coolness of the past Spring and Summer has not been favorable to the development of the nuisance in its aggravation; still all men who wear a mustache have even this year shuddered to find occasionally that the brown wretches were dangling from their cherished ornaments, when their waxed ends have broken the web by which the inch-worm was climbing back to the branch from which the wind had shaken it. Many trees in the Park (we mean, of course, the City Hall triangle, where a dainty little park used to be) are in full leaf, and are ornaments now, which, last year at this time, were leafless, and little else than bare frames to suspend the span-worms from; which difference in favor of 1859 is not owing to any municipal care for the honored relics of a once cherished park, but simply to the fact that the mercury has kept cool in the thermometer, and the mortality tables kept pretty free of coup de soleil during June. It would not be difficult, however, to give us for next Summer a greater immunity from the pest than we have this year enjoyed, even if it should be as hot in June as if New-York sweltered under the Equator, and the mercury had taken up its permanent abode among the nineties. The newspapers have been recommending that bonfires be kindled under the trees, with the expectation that the insects, while in their winged state, would hover to the flames and be consumed. We have not seen this tried, and know not how effectual it would be. The span-worm's "perfect insect" is a miller, however; it flies most by day, and for that reason the fires might fail to tempt them in large numbers to their ruin. But the image of the leaf-rollers, with which all our trees abound, are moths—night-flies—and the bonfires would no doubt involve them in a great slaughter. If the reader, in passing through the Park, will inspect the trunks of the older trees, and see how under the sheltering edge of each old wound in them, and under the loose flakes of bark, and, looking upward, how the larger branches are almost covered with cocoons, a more effectual prevention of the nuisance will suggest itself. There is scarcely an exception to the rule that the larger branches of the older trees just now are abundant in these cocoons. Not even the ailanthus is entirely free—not even the male ailanthus, to which all the sickening odor is attributable, and which may easily be distinguished by its clusters of long stems, thinly set with small staminate flowers, horribly-scented, and yielding, when struck at this season, a yellow dust from the female, which bears clusters of purplish pods that are never offensive, and a little later in the Summer add much to the beauty of our street-foliage.

And in passing, we ought to say that, sickening as this odor of the male ailanthus is, it will not account for all the bad smells that the citizen encounters while its pollen loads the air. A gentleman who, in prosecuting his physiological studies, is accustomed to submit all manner of fish and flesh to his dissecting knife, went home late at night after one of the hottest days of last week, to find his house redolent of a most ancient and fish-like smell. Biddy, on being questioned, gave it as her opinion that it came from the poisonous ailanthus before the door. All the windows had been open through the day, and she volunteered the opinion that if the windows were kept closed and the trees cut down, it would speedily disappear. A more careful inspection, however, betrayed the fact that the odor arose not from Mr. DOWNING's pest, but jointly from the cadavers of a lobster and a blue fish, which, after furnishing the lesson in comparative anatomy in the morning, Biddy had neglected to give a decent burial. This is by the way, however.

Each of these grey cocoons with which the tree trunks are studded, and the larger branches coated, has within it the larva of a span-worm, out of which, in a few days, the white miller will emerge. Now if the owner of the tree, or the Park-keeper, will take the trouble to visit each tree, and with a stout jack-knife or a scraper will remove each of these cocoons and burn them, (and it would take but an hour or two to clear of every one a good-sized tree,) he will find next Summer that his tree is a green and leafy ornament, while his neighbor's is an unmitigated nuisance. This work should be done soon, however. The emerging butterfly stops near the spot where its cast-off larva-case is attached, dries its wings in the sun, flutters about briefly to find a mate, the female deposits her score or two of eggs close by each other on the bark of the tree, and dies. These eggs are green, hard, like beads, and scarcely half the size of a common pin-head. One can hardly fail to find them on the trunk of any tree that was infested by the worms, and probably close by them another cluster, stained by the storms of several months to very nearly the color of the bark they are glued on, the minute opening into each of which shows that the insect long ago crawled out and went about the business of growing, gorging on leaves, spinning his cocoon, emerging as an emblem of innocence, and, perhaps, fathering this new brood alongside. These are small subjects for grave journals to discuss, but perhaps as essential to the immediate comfort of citizens as another victory of the Allies would be, or another walk on a tight-rope across Niagara.

The Humboldt Obsequies.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Permit me to make through the columns of your valuable journal a few remarks in regard to the funeral services to be held by the Germans of this City in honor of the late Baron von HUMBOLDT, on Monday, the 11th inst. I have already read the programme in the various German papers, and it appears to me, as also to many of my friends, that a part of the arrangements is the greatest humbug ever to be attempted. If the great and good ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT could have foreseen that his countrymen on this side of the Atlantic would honor his memory in such an absurd, nay, ridiculous way, I am sure he would have prohibited it. What do you for instance say, that 24 learned Germans ((Gelehrte) dressed in the deepest mourning shall follow the catafalque? I do not in the least doubt that many intelligent Germans are residing within this City, but then I never thought that 24 learned Germans, men representing the various sciences, were in our midst; for certainly I do not call the thousands of Germans dressed in mourning who follow here rather the study of drinking beer and glorifying in the remembrance of their past Maiden's life—a life during which to my own knowledge most of them have not so much profited. In conclusion, I wish to say that it is the opinion of the intelligent portion of the Germans that the celebration ought to have been performed long ago, and in a manner becoming and conventionally, just as the American Geographical and Statistical Society has done it.

Yours truly, H. E.

BURGLARY IN NEW-JERSEY.—For some time past, during this and the last Summer, a large number of house robberies have been committed along the Jersey shore, between Bells Ferry and Fort Lee, by persons in boats from New-York. About 2 o'clock on Friday morning these accomplished experts entered a Summer residence near Guttenberg, by means of implements to the door keys, and got off with a gold watch and chain of some value. The watch was No. 18,893, with hunting case, with a peculiar chain of massive hammered gold, studded with agates of blue stone set in gold.

[illegible] Chief in disbanding" &c., &c. We believe that it is usual, in all military organizations in all military nations, for superior officers to support or non-officers with their superior officer's actions or they throw more power—and that superior officers are only superior, so they obey their superior. Notwithstanding that the London Times recently did the United States the honor to refer to the protection of our Militia organization, we are free to confess that its constitution like the above order, is, militarily speaking, in an inverse position; things are always done by inverted actions, without any fixed military principle.

To explain our position, as individuals. The principles of the position assumed by the members of the Twelfth Regiment are as follows:

The origin of the Twelfth Regiment was the consolidation, by act of the Legislative bodies, of all the militiated Militia of this County, constituting the several "crack" companies of our City, to wit: the Independent Guard, Tompkins Blues, Light Guard, &c., &c. These companies were all native Americans by birth, notorious, celebrated and famed for the perfection of their organization, their discipline and military bearing. If the Regiment has not progressed in numerical force or in discipline, the fact must be attributed, not to the fault of the Regiment collectively, or to the men individually, but to the lack of any esprit de corps, due to the absence of a true American military spirit. The misfortunes of the Regiment lie deep in the rotten military mode of governing our military volunteer system—by which mode of government a disgust has been engendered in the breast of every free-feeling, generous-spirited man; a disgust which, during the last fifteen years, has driven almost every native-born citizen from the First Division, and which has allowed its ranks to be filled by our German and Irish fellow-citizens, most of the "four thousand" troops that paraded on the 4th inst. hardly eight hundred, including officers, of this number were of American parentage.

The Seventh Regiment stands apart in this respect. Its morale, its discipline, its integrity, rest entirely upon the merits of every soldier individually. The State Military Bureau has had no more to do with the organization and splendid military discipline, order and moral position of this Regiment, than it has had in the organization of the Zouaves in Italy.

The peculiar merit of our military system is disorganization. To the Captains of companies alone remains the merit of keeping their companies together; all action above this, by superior officers, is to fret and worry the men from the ranks. This peculiarity of our militia system bears heavily upon the Twelfth Regiment. The men selected and elected for their commandant Col. COZZA, a bit of a military martinet, but a true soldier. This gentleman had been a member of the Legislature, in which capacity he caused to be passed certain additions to the Militia Laws, compelling Major and Brigadier Generals to instruct their commands in field and other evolutions. This law called forth all the indignation of those officers on the head of Col. COZZA. The first opportunity, he was charged with divers offenses; tried, and, of course, cashiered. Then, he was elected Colonel in the Twelfth Regiment, and for a negative offense, was again brought before a Court Martial, tried, and of course, cashiered; for what else could have occurred when the officers bringing him to trial were at once his accusers and his judges. Of course, they will "cover" with the Commander-in-Chief.

Americans have ever been justly accorded "a law-abiding people." In this respect the members of the Twelfth Regiment severally, and combined in official military organization, have not only as loyal citizens obeyed the laws, but they have helped to sustain them when they have been assailed by others. May not the members of the Twelfth Regiment then appeal to the sympathy and moral support of their fellow-citizens of this great City, when they shall know of the great wrong and the injustice done them by the military magnates of the State.

These are the wrongs and the injustice that the Twelfth Regiment complain of, to wit:

The Twelfth Regiment was formed by the consolidation of the élite of American (crack) highly-disciplined Companies, which have added lustre to the military reputation of the State for the last thirty years.

That these Companies have expended within this period over a half million of dollars to uniform and maintain the military prestige and name and fame of the New-York Militia.

That these Companies elected Colonel COZZA, who is unfortunately obnoxious to the powers that be.

That the Regiment is uniformed according to law, and numerically stronger than the Second, Fifty-fifth, Tenth and other Regiments attached to the First Division; several of the members of which Regiments are not legal citizens, while not a hundred and eighty men of the Twelfth Regiment are native-born citizens.

That the Twelfth Regiment is ordered to be consolidated with a Regiment far inferior in numbers, inferior in discipline, in uniform and in military spirit.

The Twelfth Regiment has a right to respectfully ask why a new Regiment—the Highland Guard—inferior in numbers, inferior in citizenship, and permitted to wear a foreign illegal uniform, should be organized? Why is it not consolidated with the Tenth Regiment, also wearing uniforms foreign to the State regulation dress?

The Twelfth Regiment has a right to respectfully ask why the Fifty-fifth is illegally divided, and one half permitted (although both halves combined are inferior in number to the Twelfth Regiment) to wear a foreign uniform and the other half to be organized into a separate battalion? why not consolidate these either each or both halves of the Fifty-fifth with the Tenth Regiment, if consolidation be necessary to the benefit of the service.

The Twelfth Regiment, feeling that the attempt to consolidate them with the Tenth Regiment, is to deprive the members of their dearest right, their elective franchise—the constitutional right to elect their own Governor, officer, or Commandant—the superior officers fearing that they (the Twelfth Regiment) would reelect their late Commandant, Col. COZZA, cashiered, have sought the power of their position to consolidate the Twelfth Regiment with the Tenth Regiment, possessing a Colonel, to prevent them, the members of the Twelfth, availing themselves of their invested rights to elect and select a Commandant of their own choosing.

If, under such circumstances, the members of the Twelfth Regiment, viewing all these outre acts of the Military Bureau at head quarters, and the persecution of their immediate commanding superior officers, they as free American citizens, have deemed it treason upon themselves, to ask of the Military Bureau that justice which they considered themselves entitled to, and their petition being treated with contempt, and they left without redress. If, under such circumstances, they have evinced any improper feeling of wrong, or may have been guilty of any impulsive action in simply exhibiting their been fide numerical strength and actual legal existence, they could to influenced with no feeling of disrespect to their Commander-in-Chief or any of his subordinates, and certainly with no desire to outrage public feeling, whose sympathy it was, and is, their desire to obtain. They have so mildly and energetically on the occasion stances would permit, evinced only those feelings which characterized their fathers who threw overboard the tea illegally forced upon them, and whose spirit fought and won for us the Revolutionary Independence, which the militia form the chief illustration in the annual celebration of the event. The members of the Twelfth are proud in being the descendants of these glorious men, and trust that while they never may be found wanting in respect to their lawfully elected Commandant, Governor, &c., &c.; that while they maintain their own self-respect, and sustain the institutions and authorities of their beloved country, that their fellow-citizens will not only sympathize with them, but that they will afford them all their moral support, where they do no wrong; but simply ask for and earnestly seek to maintain the invested rights of American citizens, whether in their capacity of volunteer, citizen soldiers, or law-abiding civilians. Accident on the New-York Central Railroad.

From the Albany Argus, 8th.

The express train, due here at 3:30 yesterday afternoon, ran off the track about a mile this side of the Oneida station. We saw the conductor, Mr. YATES, last evening, and learned from him the following particulars:

At the place of the accident there was an embankment about 15 feet high. The engine, tender, baggage-car, and smoking-car, kept the track. The five passenger-cars went off, and the two first of them went down the embankment end upmost. The first and second were uncoupled as they went off the rail, letting the second go down the bank, while the fire was dragged along across a bridge, over a road-way, which threw the rear end up, and precipitated it down the bank. The brakeman on the rear of this car fell under the car in the ditch, but was not seriously injured.

No person was killed and no one is supposed to be dangerously injured.

A lady from Middleburg, and another from Rutland, Vt., had each a collar-bone broken.

A lady from Wayne County had the small bone of her leg broken.

Another lady from the same county appeared to have been injured internally, so as to cause vomiting, but how seriously it was not known when our informant left.

Mr. CHENELL, of Auburn, one of the Directors, had his shoulder dislocated. The intelligence last evening was that he was tolerably comfortable.

A lady whose ankle was dislocated came down on the evening train and went to Troy.

Other persons received bruises and scratches, but none, so far as we could learn, of a very serious character.

The only information as to the cause of the accident, which we obtained, was that it was supposed to have resulted from the springing or spreading of the rails.

From the Albany Journal of last morning.

The train was moving very rapidly when it came upon a rail which had just been set down, but which had not been sufficiently spiked. The result was that it was displaced, and two of the passenger-cars were thrown off the track. The first of the two was badly broken. The other was not.

Those ladies and other travelers dislocated, sprained, and bruised in the accident, are doubtless [illegible] Oneida Depot, and the train was detained for the purpose of collecting the revenue, viz.: [illegible] by the number of conductors, and [illegible] in advance of salary of those accused, having been carried into effect in precedence, [illegible] upon you, and, through you, upon the [illegible] which you have experienced, the Subscribers [illegible] are authorized and empowered by the Hon. Supreme Court.

The Department takes this occasion to say that in selecting the Inspectors of Elections for the ensuing year, the Commissioners of New-York, especially in the large populous districts, have been greatly embarrassed by a desire, on the part of many of those nominated by a desire, on the part of many of those nominated by the friends of the officers, to be relieved from more prominence in and devotion to the duties of their respective duties. It is expected that in future there will be a greater degree of attention and obedience to the Regulations of the Department, and that the parties will evince their desire to justify the confidence reposed in them by an increased vigilance and devotion to the public service. Should the Department be disappointed in these reasonable expectations, the advance allowed will immediately be withdrawn. If, in consequence of want of industry and attention on the part of the officials, it shall become necessary to increase the clerical force in any division in which the salaries have been increased, it will come the first element entered in that division to be reduced.

Hereafter the attention of the Department will be had the heads of divisions, who will be required to see that faithful compliance of the instructions in their respective divisions, and it is expected that they, as well as all chief officers, will be promptly at their respective duty at 9 A. M., and there remain until the expiration of each day has been completed; and any neglect of this rule on their part, or neglect to report promptly to the Collector any interference or delinquency on the part of other officials, must be considered cause of removal by the Collector."

Requiring your immediate attention to the foregoing,

I am, Sir, very respectfully, Yours, &c.,

AUGUSTUS SCHELL, Collector.

Slightly Touched.

Mayor TIEMANN recently received a letter addressed to him care for "Mr. E. D. DAY, or the Cashier of the Globe Bank, N. Y., New-York City." The Mayor could not ascertain that there was any such bank in this City; neither could he learn who Mr. DAY was, or where he was to be found. He yesterday he determined to open the letter, hoping thereby to learn more accurately what the intimate relationship was intended to be. It contained a $5 bill of the "Globe Bank," which was well worn, was dated "May 9, 1859," and ran thus:

NEW-MARKET, Wayne Co., Ill., June 28, 1859.

Mr. CASHIER: Your money will not pass out here at par, and I have concluded rather than disgrace your country, I would go at loss myself. Inclosed is one dollar, if it is yours, and I have you to send me $5 in current money, minus your exchange in sending, as much as you can stand, and oblige F. CARLEW.

Direct as above.

The Mayor does not expect to meet with the Cashier of the Globe Bank very speedily.

GOVERNMENTAL ECONOMY—REDUCTION IN THE PENSION OFFICE.—The Constitution, July 6, says:

"It has been generally known for some months past that the diminution in the business of the Pension Bureau would, about the present period, require a corresponding reduction of the clerical force; and that, for the present fiscal year, no appropriation was asked for a continuance of the force heretofore required in the execution of the Bounty-Land Act of 1855, although claims continue to be presented under its provisions, comparatively to the number of three hundred per day. We learn that on the 5th inst. the number of its employees was cut down to the number of permanent clerks allowed. This only could have been effected upon the authority of the Interior and Commissioner of Pensions, and it was a difficult and delicate duty to perform. We know but little of any of the gentlemen affected by this work of reform, but from the character of the public functionaries whose duty it was to perform it, we doubt not but that the public interests were only conserved, and injustice to individuals avoided, so far as possible. We understand that during the present Administration, the Pension Office—the present clerical force being now about one-half of what it was on the 4th March, 1857.

FIRE IN HENRY-STREET.—Last night, shortly after 11 o'clock, a fire broke out in the dwelling-house No. 220 Henry-street, occupied by William B. MUNDY, but from what cause is not known. The firemen of the district were early on the ground, and succeeded in extinguishing the flames. But little damage was sustained.

FOURTEEN PERSONS DROWNED.—SAD ACCIDENT OF A PICNIC PARTY.—In the wake of the Adriatic (Mich.) Expositor, July 5, has the following: "A sad accident occurred, yesterday afternoon, at Clear Lake, Steuben County, Ind., to a pleasant picnic of Hillsdale, by the upsetting of a sailboat containing a party of twenty-seven persons, mostly young children, fourteen of whom were drowned. Several of the number were residents of the town of Reading, Hillsdale County. The following are the names of those drowned from Reading, Hillsdale County: Mrs. Wm. Turner and adopted daughter, about five years old; Miss Louisa Turner, daughter of Nelson Turner, aged about twenty, who was formerly a student of Hillsdale College; a son of Nelson Turner, aged nine years; Danforth Berry and wife, and brother; Jefferson Berry. The following were from Hillsdale County and Indiana: Mr. Lyman Sloat and wife, and Miss Lucy Sloat; Mr. Wolf, and Mr. Glen, the owner of the boat, was also lost. The names of the others we have not yet learned.

A Penang paper states that the Mutiny story is a failure. The death of the Imam is spoken of in such an elsewhere account that it is believed there will not be a single Native now left in the island, in the course of ten days more. A Singapore journal adds: "We cannot regret to observe that the pleasant sensations entertained, with what we supposed, with reference to Singapore some weeks since. On the part of the Government everything has been done that suggested itself, to meet the evil of which the planters complained. Dr. Oxley was despatched to Penang to the Malacca to order to procure additional aid and note of the true cause, the mutiny of his servants being utterly borne by the Government of India, the new stock being expected at the harvest, and [illegible] Unfortunately, not withstanding Dr. Oxley's skill, the disease has widely increased, the plant now [illegible] to Chowtow, the number of the [illegible] and mace, so that the expense has [illegible] Dr. Oxley and Mr. Thomas entirely [illegible] the ground being laid out for building [illegible] such nothing trees to remain being [illegible] of ornamental trees. CITY INTELLIGENCE.

A NEW COUNTERFEIT.—For a week past a number of well-executed counterfeit bills of the Chemical Bank of NY, on the Ocean Bank, Tom Fisher, N. Y., have been passed in this City. These were passed Michael Hall, Tom Hayes and Tom Bayard, on Thursday night, about 9½ o'clock, where one of the bills was to Mr. Reuben Connell, keeper of the Carlington Hotel, corner of Eighth-avenue and Broadway, in payment for refreshments. The bill was accepted without hesitation, but scarcely had the parties left the premises before Mr. Connell suspected there had been imposition upon, as he observed the green seal of a pin which they had just purchased. Returning to a Bank Note Detector he ascertained that the bill was a counterfeit, so he immediately followed the men. They meanwhile proceeded to the corner of Mr. Henry Bauman, corner of Eighth-avenue and Broadway, and tendered him one of the bogus 5s in payment for drinks, but Mr. Bauman detected it, saying he had been victimized a day or two before in taking that sort of money, and showed them a supplement to a Bank Note Detector, which described the bill to be a counterfeit. The men expressed surprise and paid their score in good money. Leaving the saloon, they were about to drive off in a cabriolet when Mr. Connell came up and had the three arrested by the Twenty-second Ward Police. Justice Kelly held a hearing for examination.

STRUCK BY A STICK OF TIMBER.—An unknown boy, while passing through Centre-street, yesterday afternoon, was knocked senseless by a heavy piece of timber which fell from the fourth story window of Mallon's piano factory, No. 140 Centre-street. Officer Gorman, of the Twenty-second Precinct, who witnessed the occurrence, took the boy to the Sixth Ward Station-house. Two workmen in the piano factory, named Joseph Miller and Ferdinand Bauer, were subsequently arrested and committed by Justice Connor for gross carelessness in letting the timber fall.

THE FOURTH WARD READING AND COFFEE ROOM.—The institution received yesterday a very handsome ivy pitcher, suitably engraved, as a present from Bray & Mason, of No. 16 Maiden-lane, accompanied by an encouraging letter to Oliver Garrison, the superintendent. We learn that the reading-room is in a prosperous if not in a flourishing condition, and that if some dozen or more of the merchants of New-York will contribute from their stock, as Messrs. Bray & Mason have done, such articles as are wanted by the near reading room, its success will be certain.

BRIEF MURDER WHILE INSANE.—THOMAS WILSON, an Englishman, 62 years of age, who resided at No. 207 West Seventeenth-street, on the 22d ult., in an attack of delirium tremens, cut his throat with a razor. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where he lingered until Thursday last. Coroner Schirmerhorn held an inquest yesterday, when a verdict in accordance with the facts was rendered. Wilson had been a man of very intemperate habits. He leaves a wife and family.

FOUND DROWNED.—A child, six years of age, named Wm. McGillicuddy, who lived with his parents at No. 201 West Fourteenth-street, was yesterday found in the water at the dumping-place foot of Seventeenth-street, East River. The little fellow had been missed in the morning, and it is supposed he went down to the docks and fell overboard. Coroner Gamble held an inquest, and a verdict was given of "Death by drowning."

GIFT OF REAL DISTRESS.—For the benefit of the parties referred to in the TIMES, a short time ago, the sum of $139 95 was received at our business office. Yesterday, our messenger, on entering the house for the purpose of paying to the family that portion of the sum recently collected, found the body of the oldest of the two brothers laid out for burial.

Police Commissioners.

THE LAWS FOR THE OBSERVANCE OF SUNDAY TO BE ENFORCED.

At the meeting of the Police Commissioners, at 2 P. M. yesterday, Mr. SHILLIAN presiding, and all the members of the Board present, Mr. Ulthoeffer presented the following report with reference to the enforcement of the Sunday laws: The Committee on Laws and Ordinances, having considered the petitions for and remonstrances against the enforcement of the existing laws relative to the observance of Sunday, respectfully offer the following resolutions:

1. This Board is bound, by its organization, to enforce the laws as they exist; it being a well-settled principle that the administrative departments cannot with safety suspend a law on the ground of doubts as to its conflicting with the spirit of the Constitution.

2. The Christian religion is that which has always existed since the settlement of the country, and now exists in these United States, recognized and protected by the masses of the people of various religious denominations, and nearly all of which regard the Christian Sabbath as a part of their religion.

3. That the highest judicial authorities regard the Christian religion as the prevailing religion of the country; and that the protection of the rights of all other religions merely still leaves the principles, practices and laws of the whole Christian community paramount and in full force.

4. That the free principles of religious liberty do not affect the smallest portions of the community to call upon the great masses of the people to abandon the observance of those Sunday laws which have existed since the settlement of the country.

5. That present abuses in disregarding the Sunday laws, particularly in public exhibitions on Sundays, and trafficking in liquors and other like things, should, so far as the law allows, be prevented by the whole power of the Police Force, and of the Magistracy.

6. That the laws of the land, in conformity with the opinions of the masses of the people in regard to moral principles and practices, and for the punishment of disorderlies on any day of the week, are not to be disregarded or repealed because of peculiar notions of morals entertained by small portions of the community.

The report was adopted unanimously.

The resignations of Samuel W. Ellis, of the Third, John G. Forbes, of the Fourteenth, and Charles Allaire, of the Second Precincts, were presented and accepted, and the Board adjourned to Friday next.

A general order will probably be issued by the General Superintendent, to-day, directing the Police to see that all places at which liquor is sold, and all theatres, be closed on the next and all succeeding Sabbaths, and that the proprietors of all such places, who refuse to comply with the law, be arrested.

Commissioners of Health.

THE CASE OF THE JOHN BOYNTON.

The Commissioners of Health met yesterday at 12 o'clock, present all the members. Dr. Gunn called the attention of the Board to the case of the brig John Boynton, which arrived from Port-au-Prince about a week since; the Captain of which (Capt. Wm. Blye) died yesterday at his residence in Brooklyn, as reported of yellow fever. Dr. Gunn stated that he had seen the Captain on his arrival—that he was then apparently well, and had no symptom of yellow fever. Dr. Williams had also seen him, and he reported it a case of intermittent fever. Dr. Gunn also stated that the certificate of the Consul of Port-au-Prince had been received by him, stating that no yellow fever was in that port, also that several Captains who had recently arrived had made affidavits to the same effect; that there were no cases of yellow fever on board the vessel. The vessel, however, was detained a few days for observation, and was then permitted to come up, and was now lying in the stream, with a health permit. Dr. ROCKWELL also reported that he was requested by Mayor TIEMANN to visit the case and obtain all the information he could in relation to the death of the man; that he was unable to see the case, but from all the information he could collect, he considered the man did not die of yellow fever. Dr. Bond stated that he saw the corpse of the Captain; that from the appearance he deemed that an inquest was necessary, but that he did not determine, and did not regret to say one, that it was a case of yellow fever.

The testimony of the mate of the vessel was taken, to the effect that there was no fever in Port-au-Prince; that he had had yellow fever himself, and had seen other persons sick with it; that he had been in the trade between this port and Port-au-Prince three years, and had never contracted the disease. Dr. Gunn further said that the Captain had complained to him of fever, which appeared to be a case of yellow fever, which had the paroxysm.

President Hoffman thereupon offered the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Commissioners of Health, after a full and careful investigation of the cause of death of the Captain of the brig John Boynton, unhesitatingly pronounce the cause of its being a case of yellow fever as unfounded; and also that the Commissioners deny that Dr. Boyd reported it as such.

Resolved, That inasmuch as the cargo is to be transhipped to another port, the abovenamed vessel be permitted to lighter her cargo from the stream, and that the Inspector of Vessels attend in fumigating her thoroughly after the discharge of her cargo.

The Board adjourned to Monday.

The Yellow Fever Case.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The statement in the TIMES of yesterday to the effect that the Captain of the John Boynton died of yellow fever, &c., is erroneous. The certificate of the American Consul at Port-au-Prince, and the affidavits of the mate and passengers of the Boynton, will be filed at the Health Office, prove that Port-au-Prince is free from contagious and infectious diseases, and the Health Officer, the Deputy-Health Officer, and the attending physician all concur in the opinion that Capt. Blye died of bilious remittent fever, the result of congestion of the brain. Dr. Bond, the Health Officer of Brooklyn, denies having made the statement that Capt. Blye died of yellow fever. Dr. Bond did not see Capt. Blye until after his death. THEO. WALKER,

Deputy Health Officer.

[We published the statement upon the authority of credible men, who averred that Health-Officer Bond pronounced it without equivocation yellow fever. Under the new theories, however, that prevail concerning quarantine and yellow fever, it ought to make no difference whether Capt. Blye died of yellow fever, "doubtful" or bilious fever.]

Police Reports.

MURDER OF A RAILROAD GUARD.—Mr. Adolphus G. Hanger, of No. 242 Pearl-street, yesterday laid an information against Lewis Hanger, his book-keeper, and Hall Calmon, a porter in his employ, for the alleged purloining of a bond of the Hackensack, Manhattan and Newark Railroad. Mr. Hanger valued the bond at $250, and swears that it was stolen about the first of last February. He missed it about that time, but concluded it had been lost or mislaid. Upon inquiry, however, of the President of the road whether he would pay the January interest without the production of the bond, the latter replied that the interest had been already paid, about the first of February, to the defendant Hanger. Officer King, of the Lower Police Court, arrested the two men, and Justice Connolly committed them to the Tombs in default of $1,000 bail each.

INJURED IN A ROW.—Thomas Brennan said something which reduced his wife, alias Mrs. John Williams, alias Thompson, on Thursday night, at No. 130 Mulberry-street. Mrs. Thompson's husband forthwith broke Brennan's skull with a hatchet. The injured man was taken to the City Hospital.

CLUBBED FOR HIS CURIOSITY.—Robert Stephens saw a street light on the corner of New Canal-street and Baxter, as he was walking home from his work. His curiosity induced him to linger to see the result. The Police arriving, Stephens ran off fearing an arrest. The officers pursued, overtook and beat him soundly with their clubs. He was taken to the City Hospital.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.—Officer Sherlock, of the Sixth Ward, yesterday arrested Geo. Conklin, 22 years of age, on a charge of attempting to rob Mr. H. Myers as he was passing through the Park on Wednesday night. Justice Connolly committed the prisoner for trial.

BROOKLYN INTELLIGENCE.

SERIOUS ASSAULT.—THERON O'CONNOR was brought before Justice BLEECKER yesterday, on a charge of committing a serious assault and battery upon the person of FRANK HUNT, Wednesday night, on Baltic, near Hoyt-street. The complainant was found insensible upon the sidewalk in Baltic-street by the Police, suffering from a severe contusion on the head. He was restored to consciousness, when he stated that he had been beaten by O'CONNOR. The accused, who keeps a liquor store, says complainant came to his place after he had closed up and demanded admission, which demand he refused to comply with and told him to go away. Instead of obeying orders, HUNT commenced kicking at the door, when O'CONNOR came out and clubbed him. The accused was committed for examination.

BASE BALL.—Two new base ball clubs have recently been organized in this city. One called the Reindeer has elected the following officers: President, J. A. SANFORD; Vice-President, E. SELYEA; Secretary, J. W. VAIL; Treasurer, W. MULFORD. The name of the other Club is Eagle, of which the following-named persons have been elected to fill the various offices: President, S. H. WILLIAMS; Vice-President, A. D. WEBSTER; Secretary, FRANK HARDER; Treasurer, WALTER J. BELLINGS.

COUNTERFEIT MONEY.—The keeper of a small store on Atlantic-street, named Barry, passed a $2 counterfeit bill, yesterday afternoon, upon a woman peddling bouquets. The character of the bill was immediately discovered, but the storekeeper refused to take it back. The person holding the bill applied to the Deputy-Superintendent's office, where Detective Hoagins took the case in charge, and the person who passed the bill was finally induced to redeem it.

FORGERY.—A sailor, named ARTHUR MCCARTHY, was arrested yesterday for forging an order for $80, on the Purser of the United States Surveying schooner Bache, which was subsequently passed to a man named F. J. SWEENY. The latter person, upon presenting the order, discovered that it was a forgery, and caused McCarthy to be arrested. The accused was committed for examination by Justice VOORHIES.

DEATH FROM BURNS.—MARY AMES, 7 years old, daughter of GEORGE AMES, residing at Greenpoint, died Thursday night from burns received on the 4th inst., by her clothing taking fire from fire-crackers. Coroner SMITH held an inquest, when a verdict of death from accidental causes was rendered.

AN OLD FERRY REVIVED.—The old Jackson Ferry, between Jackson street, New-York and Hudson-avenue, this City, went into operation again on Thursday last, under a lease from New-York City.

THE BROOKLYN COURTS.—The July calendar, numbering twenty-five causes, will be taken up in the City Court by Judge CULVER, on Monday, the 11th inst., when the first twenty causes on the calendar will be called, viz: Nos. 1, Bennett vs. The City of Brooklyn; 2, Cardiff vs. Pasquay; 3, McNulty and wife vs. The City of Brooklyn; 4, Briggs and other vs. Rowe; 5, Oster and other vs. Egan and other; 6, Vanderhoef vs. The Brooklyn and Williamsburgh Ferry Companies; 7, Riley vs. Moran and wife; 8, McGahn vs. McGhn; 9, Wood vs. Robinson; 10, Eisenman vs. Eisenzer and other; 11, Parsons vs. Hanley; 12, Remsen and wife vs. The Williamsburgh Ferry Company; 13, McCormick vs. Backus; 14, Sears vs. Jack; 15, Bishop, Administratrix vs. The City of Brooklyn; 16, Laverick vs. Hill; 17, Chadborne vs. Jack; 18, Horton vs. Bartlett; 19, Poynes vs. Cook; 20, Kimball, Jr., and wife vs. Slattery.

Superintendent Neighbors, of Texas, writes to the Indian Bureau that it is reported another attack will be made upon the Caddo reserve. Much ill-feeling prevails, and the Governor of Texas has appointed five commissioners to assist in preventing further hostilities, and to make such arrangements as will insure the preservation of peace. In the meantime the Indian agents are making arrangements to avoid the whole difficulty by removing the Reserve Indians on the other side of Red River. By the prudence of the agents of the Indian Bureau and the officers of the army, a bloody conflict has been prevented.

A counterfeiter named Joseph O. Lloyd was arrested at Wyandotte, Mich., July 6, on a charge of complicity with a gang of counterfeiters in Essex County, N. Y. Five others, mentioned above, of a gang of silver-coin counterfeiters were broken in upon, in that county, and some of them arrested, including one named Farnsworth. Their dies and them found, as well as a supply of bogus quarters, halves and ten cent pieces, were found at the time. At once as the arrest was made, Lloyd disappeared, and his whereabouts was a mystery to the prosecution until discovered by a more chance.

All who take a proper interest in the great scenes that are now passing initially, have felt the need of a correct military map. This want is now most satisfactorily supplied by a large sized map, just lithographed, which has been compiled from the most reliable authorities by Lieut. Ives, of the Topographical Engineers of the United States Army. It represents not only the great battle-fields, but the roads, common roads, mountain passes, bridges, canals, marshes, &c., &c., and in all respects is a complete military map. Lieutenant-General Scott, we understand, has given it strong commendation.

From the Journal of Commerce.

MILITARY MAP OF THE SEAT OF WAR.—Lieut. Ives, of the Topographical Engineers, U. S. A., has compiled from authentic sources a large size colored Map of the Seat of War in Italy, on which are depicted, besides the useful information usually furnished, the first and second-class fortifications, the forts and redoubts, military and commercial harbors, roads, mountain passes, &c.

From the New-York Herald.

It is of very large size, and by far the best that we have yet seen.

From the Courrier des Etats Unis.

Parmi celle qui ont été publiées en Amérique il n'en est aucune qui offre un tableau plus complet et plus exact de la contrée qui s'étend le monde entier a les yeux que la carte militaire du Lieut. J. C. Ives.

This is an entirely new Map, on a large scale, made from the most reliable authorities, by Lieutenant Ives, of the United States Army, and the trade can feel assured before ordering, that it is the very best Map of the Seat of War published.

TO THE PUBLIC.
City Inspector's Department,
New-York, June 11, 1859.
The undersigned having assumed the duties of the office of City Inspector, and fully realizing that among those duties none at this present season of the year require greater or more prompt attention than the work of keeping the streets of our City in a healthy and cleanly condition, deems it his duty to call the attention of the public to the recent practice, on the part of some, in violation of the following daily violation of the laws and ordinances:
1. The throwing of ashes, garbage and filth upon the streets.
2. The habit of merchants and dealers in permitting shavings, straw, and other substances used in packing to be cast upon the sidewalks, or placed upon the sidewalk, from whence it is soon scattered over the street, (it is the duty of persons to have the same immediately removed at their own expense.)
3. The daily sweepings from the stores and shops are swept into the streets or gutters, instead of being placed in proper receptacles to be taken away by the scavengers.
4. The emptying on the streets of the cleanings of filth from yards and cellars, and the rubbish and old material from the repairing of buildings.
5. The throwing into the streets and gutters noxious, offensive, and other substances.
The practice of any one of the above acts is and such a direct violation of the laws and ordinances, subjecting the offender to arrest, fine and imprisonment, but owing to impatience and reluctance the lodging of citizens, and involving such much difficulty of successful operation, with the largely increasing City population, I have determined, on the part of the undersigned, shall and will continue to be made to have our streets kept in a cleanly and healthy condition, and I earnestly and confidently hope and look for the cooperation and assistance of all classes of citizens in putting an end to the vicious practices complained of. With some of and another class which will inevitably accompany, shall I have to a copy of the several ordinances referred to will be sent at each dwelling-house and place of business.
Ash-carts will pass through the streets of the several wards daily, at hours announced to officers, and notice, the undersigned desires that every person who may be aware of any violation of the laws, will give information, at the office of the Superintendent of the Bureau of Street Inspection, at the office corner of Grand and Elizabeth-sts., and it shall be promptly attended.
Notice of the approach of the ash and garbage carts will be given by ringing a bell. Very respectfully,
DANIEL E. DELAVAN, City Inspector.

Base Ball.

BROOKLYN vs. MORRISANIA.—The first of three games between these Clubs came off yesterday afternoon, over the grounds of the Union Stamp Manufacturing Company, near Newtown Creek, South Brooklyn. Over 4,000 spectators of this interesting game were present. If any argument could be adduced to practically illustrate the growing popularity of the game of Base Ball with the American people, a view of that Greenpoint grounds yesterday, with its assemblage, would certainly, with its numbers, be considered the most magnificent. The game terminated in a victory for the Morrisania, which Club had not met with a defeat in several years. It is said that the last time they played a game with the Empire Club of New-York, some years since, the Oxford Club became a very easy victim. The Oxford Club, however, made a match. Both the Empire Club and the Oxford played a splendid game on this occasion; and which all preferred their play on well, criticism upon individual playing would be unjust. The following is the score:

SPORTING NEWS.

The Turf—A Novel Match—The Ring—A Jumping Challenge, &c.

The Spirit of the Times says of the prospects of the Fall season on the Course:

"We regret to learn that our prospects for a Fall meeting are very poor indeed. The people in this section have seemed to have placed all their affection upon trotting, for good reasons, totally abandoned for a trot. We hope for a revival, however, and look with confidence to the time when our citizens will feel more interest in Thoroughbred racing.—This time will arrive when New-York, New-Jersey, Connecticut and Maryland will raise the wind for their home nearby to contend with our more fortunate Southern friends. Till then we cannot wait patiently for the good time coming.

Fashion and Green Allen are likely to come to scratch again in two matches to 100 pound wagons—one at mile heats, the other at two mile heats, for $2,000 a side each match.

Mr. BALLY, of Philadelphia, owner of Lancet, recently offered to trot that stallion against the California mare Princess, for from $2,500 to $5,000 a side, each horse to go in whatever rig the owner pleases, with the privilege to the owners of the mare to name the course of the stake. Mr. BALLY, to whom the challenge was given, did not accept it on the part of Lancet; but in return, offered to back Flora Temple against Lancet, at two-mile heats in harness, for the same purchase money, stating that if he could not secure the services of the Little Bay Mare for such contest, he would not let the engagement with his own mare. This proposition, like the other, was not accepted.

The following novel match is noted by Porter's Spirit:

"Since the recent exciting trots have taken place between Flora Temple and Ethan Allen, and between Flora Temple and Princess, much discussion has been had in sporting circles as to the probable degree of speed which the Flora Temple would exhibit, if brought to the post under favorable circumstances, and kept to their extreme mark; and from the discussion has sprung a variety of suggestions, as to races of different distances and styles of going. The most novel, as well as the most interesting one of these is a proposed four-mile, 24-to-a-drag-cart—the long distance to be performed by a thoroughbred, Bay-Allen pacemaker, while the three miles are being performed by the trotter. The animals spoken of in this connection are, of course, the best that can be named, and, consequently, the names of Planet, the famous four-miler, and of the California trotting-mare Princess figure in opposition to each other. The stake proposed is $10,000 a side, and the scene of the great trial one of the Long Island tracks. No direct overtures have yet been made on either side for such a contest, but everything that is currently discussed among sportsmen has a good chance of being brought to bear."

FOOT RACES.

On the 23d of June, the State Fair ground a Indianapolis presented a lively appearance. The first race for the Firemen's silver-mounted belt, and a silver cup, called together a large crowd. Dancing on the grounds, and several other amusements were announced to come off at the same time. The manner in which the arrangements were carried out and conducted, gave great satisfaction. The first race, which moreover within a few feet of a quarter of a mile.

In the first race for the belt firemen were only permitted to contend. There were four entries. The competitors ran, separate, and the time made was 6. Brown, 61 seconds; A. Kinzie, 66; D. Kerrie 62, and W. Blackford 67, whereupon B. Barker was declared winner, and buckled on the belt.

The second race for the cup, "free for all ages," (white males in the Union.) The contest was between eleven competitors, three of which ran in 56 seconds. Being a tie it was run over, and the trophy carried off by D. Kerrie, who won in 53 seconds. Very good time for a tied.

THE RING.

A "million" match has been made in St. Louis between "Shanghai Connors" and "Jem Burns," for $500 a side. Sullivan challenged Burns a few weeks since. Burns agrees to fight Sullivan. Connors is a fair standard fighter, according to the new rules of the London Prize Ring, (at catch weights.) The fight to be for the sum of $500 a side, to take place within forty miles, and not less than twenty-five miles, of the City of St. Louis, in six weeks from the first deposit, which date is Tuesday, Aug 9, 1859.

A London correspondent of the Clipper states that Jem Mace, celebrated in the annals of the Prize Ring, died in England recently. Sullivan was a Jew, and made his mark in contest with Caspar Ben. He was born on the 9th of April, 1797; his weight was about 147 pounds. He fought and defeated Jack Hudson twice; Jack Payne; the Whitecoat; Jack Langham; Gamble; Gamble; Holmes; George Wilson; he was beaten by Tom Reynolds; Jack Randall; Cyr Rose; Sampson, twice.

A JUMPING CHALLENGE.

The "Occasional" appears in Porter's Spirit:

BOSTON, Saturday, June 25, 1859.

FRIEND PORTER: I notice in your of the 18th inst. a challenge by Master STUCK WAY to jump any man in America for $2,000. This seems like a bluff affair. If this Mr. WAY will accept an offer of $500, I will jump a mile hands, stakes, and will meet you a month from the jumping contest, same forfeit with you that I do now.

Respectfully,

GEORGE F. GRAEF.
